Clever Monkey is a teacher and doctor at school. Every day, he receives many messages on Wechat. Students like to tell him their secrets and problems and ask him for help. Of course, Clever Monkey is really glad to reply to them.

I'm always late for school. I try not to be, but I can't. Please give me some advice and tell me what to do.

Tommy

You are late for school probably because you go to bed too late. My advice is to go to bed earlier and buy a clock to wake you up on time.

Clever Monkey

I was brought up (抚养) by my grandparents and began to live with my parents two years ago for a better study. They love me and I can see this in their eyes. But I don't know how to show my love to them. What can I do to let them know I also love them?

Sara

If you want to show your love to your parents, that's great. Remember their birthdays and buy them cards and presents. Try to spend time with your parents. Tell them how you feel. Try to enjoy your life. Your parents want you to be happy. If you are happy, they will be happy, too.

Clever Monkey

I'm one of the best students in my class. But I always make some mistakes which I should not make. And now, I'm afraid to see my teachers. I just don't know how to face them. Can you tell me how I can solve the problem?

Molly

The first thing you need to do is to relax. Worrying about your studies is not going to help. If you have any difficulties, tell your teachers. No teacher is going to get angry with a student who wants to improve himself.

On August 26, 1999, New York City got a terrible rainstorm. The rain caused the streets into a mess and the subway almost came to a stop.

What's worse, it happened during the morning. Many people had to stay at home instead of going to work. Some tried to call a taxi or to get on a bus. Still others faced the storm bravely, walking miles to get to work.

I was one of the people on the way to work that morning. And I found there was only one subway line that was working. Unluckily, there were so many people waiting in the station that I could not even get down the stairs to take it. So I decided to take the train. Finally, after waiting for a long time, the train came. When I got to my office, I was completely wet and very tired.

I spent most of the day drying off. When it was 5:00 pm, I was ready to go home. I was about to turn off my computer when I received an e-mail from Garth, my boss:

I would like to thank all of you who tried the best and finally reported to work. I always feel warm, when you so clearly show your devotion to the jobs. Thank you.

Garth's e-mail was short, but I learned more from that message. It taught me that a few words to show thanks can make a big difference. The rainstorm made me so tired. But Garth's words made me satisfied and put a smile back on my face.

Who do the most of the housework in your home?

Your mom, you may answer. But do you often help out with any chores at home? Here is a new study done in the US about time that parents and teenagers spend in doing chores at home.

In America, some parents give their kids rewards(奖励) for doing chores in the house. But some people don't think it is a good idea. Susie Walton, one of them, believes if kids get rewards, they will think it is unnecessary to do housework unless they get paid. "A home is a place for everyone in the family. Kids should know that they need to take part in keeping our home clean." Walton said.

Other people don't think so. They believe that rewards can teach kids how we need to work to make money. And now, there are also apps like ChoreMonster to make kids do more chores. With the app, kids get digital(电子的) points after doing chores. Then they can use their points to get real rewards, such as time playing video games or a trip to the mall. Some parents and children enjoy the app a lot.
