Mr. Clarke works in a middle school. He likes reading and often borrows some books from the library. He keeps listening to the radio every morning and reading newspapers after supper. So he knows a lot and teaches well. His students like him very much. Mike is Mr. Clarke's little son. He is only nine. He also likes reading books. And he often asks his father some questions. Mr. Clarke always thinks he's too young to understand him and explains to him with the easiest answers. Sometimes, the boy is unhappy with that.

One day, he read something about physics. When his father told him to do housework, he went on thinking of it. He asked him some questions, and his father answered all. Then his father said proudly, "Fathers always know more than sons!" The boy thought for a while and said, "I don't think so." "Oh? Why?" Mike didn't answer and asked instead, "Who discovered the secret of fallen apples?" "Newton," answered Mr. Clarke. "Why didn't his father discover it then?" Looking at his son, Mr. Clarke didn't know how to answer it!

第四节 听力填空

这一节你将听到一篇短文。请你根据听到的内容,填写下面的表格,每空一词。读两遍。

You may think you cannot live through summer without air-conditioners. But in ancient China, hand fans were the only help for people to get the heat away. A hand fan was one of the everyday things for most Chinese.

Chinese people started to use hand fans over 2 thousand years ago. They were made from different kinds of materials, including leaves, paper and silk. Later, people not only used fans to cool themselves down, but also produced them as art works, in which tuanshan and zheshan were the most common. In the shape of a full moon, tuanshan was usually made of silk. They had beautiful birds and flowers on them. Women liked to use them. Instead, men used zheshan more, because zheshan were usually made of paper and they could paint and write something on them.

Today, Chinese people still use these fans, but seldom paint or write on them. Next time when you are waving a fan, you may think of the stories behind it.

One possible version:

As a middle school student, I have to learn different subjects. Without doubt, all of these subjects are important for my further development. But among them, I like English best.

To be honest, I was poor at learning English two years ago, with great problems of pronunciation. Luckily, my best friend Betty found that and encouraged me a lot. Under her influence, I stuck to listening to English tapes every day and reading aloud after them. I also watched some classic English movies regularly. Gradually, I got much knowledge of English pronunciation. As a result, I made big progress in English learning.

Now, I become more confident on this subject because I can clearly feel the sense of achievement of learning the language. Besides, the learning experience also teaches me the spirit of never giving up, which will benefit me for a whole life.
