A woman cooked pancakes for her family and a special one for a hungry passer-by. She always put the special one on the windowsill (窗台). Every day, a hunchback (驼背者) came and took it away. Instead of expressing his thanks, he said, "The evil (邪恶) you do remains with you; and the good you do comes back to you!" Not a word of thanks. Every day he says these words: "What does he mean?" She said.

Day by day, the woman became angry. So one day, she added poison (毒药) to the pancake she prepared for him. She was about to put it on the windowsill when she shook with fear. "What am I doing?" she said. She threw it into the fire and made another one. As usual, the hunchback came, picked up the pancake and said, "The evil you do remains with you, and the good you do comes back to you!"

That evening, there was a knock on the door. To her surprise, it was her son who had been a far place to make money. He looked very weak. He said, "Mom, it's a miracle (奇迹) I'm here. While I was a mile away, I was so hungry that I almost died. Just then, an old hunchback passed by and gave me a pancake. He was kind enough to give me a whole pancake. He said, 'your need is greater than mine!' After hearing these words, the woman remembered the pancake with poison. If she had not put it into the fire, it would have been eaten by her son!"

She suddenly realized the meaning of the hunchback's words. Do good and don't even stop doing good, even if it is not appreciated (感激) at that time.

- () 34. How did the woman deal with the poisoned pancake?
A. She threw it on the road B. She put it on the windowsill
C. She threw it in the fire D. She gave it to the hunchback.
- () 35. According to the passage, we can learn that
A. the hunchback knew the woman's son
B. the hunchback wasn't a helpful man
C. the woman and the hunchback got on well
D. the woman thought the hunchback was impolite at first.
- () 36. Which of the following is the RIGHT order according to the passage?
① The hunchback gave his pancake to the woman's son
② The woman made a poisoned pancake one morning
③ The woman understood the meaning of the hunchback's words
A. ①②③ B. ②③① C. ③①② D. ①③②
- () 37. What does the writer want to tell us?
A. Be kind to hunchbacks B. Never stop doing good things
C. Be thankful to our parents D. Don't expect too much from others

On Sunday 23 April, more than 30000 people joined the 2017 London Marathon (马拉松) running 26.2 miles around the city center.

The London Marathon has taken place every year since 1981. At the first one, just 6225 people completed the course, and since then it has grown into one of the most important sporting events in the world. Each winner can get $500 000 in prize money.

However, most marathon runners are not professional (专业的). They run to raise money for charities (慈善机构) or just as a personal experience. Many people do fun things to make themselves stand out, like wearing silly clothes or doing things instead of just running.

For example, Tom Harrison took three days just to reach the halfway point, as he was crawling (爬) his hands and knees dressed as a gorilla (猩猩), trying to raise money and attention for "The Gorilla Organization."

One exciting part from this year's race was the story of Jackie and her husband, who got married on the morning of the marathon. Then they both ran the race, with Jackie doing it in her wedding dress! They were running to raise money for cancer charities, as Jackie was diagnosed (诊断) with cancer three years ago.

Matthew Rees was another runner to inspire(激励) people, as he stopped just before the finish line to help another runner the last 200 m. They didn't know each other before, but Matthew saw that David was too tired to finish the race and wanted to help him finish.

Every year there are lots of inspiring stories like this from the London Marathon, and it is a huge achievement even to run the 26.2 miles!

38. The 2017 London marathon is the _____ race.
 A. 33rd B. 35th C. 37th D. 39th
39. The meaning of the underlined word "crawling" is probably similar to _____.
 A. drawing B. walking C. singing D. swimming
40. Jackie and her husband took part in the race to _____.
 A. raise money for cancer charities B. celebrate their wedding
 C. help another runner finish the race D. catch others' attention
41. Which of the following might be the best title for the passage?
 A. The Most Important Sport B. Funny parts in Marathon
 C. More Than Running a Race D. A Personal Experience

Think of a simple object—a piece of chalk(粉笔), for example. Are you remembering its name, its shape, its color or its size? Are you remembering what it is used for, or the sound it makes when the teacher writes on the blackboard? Scientists say that memory includes different parts of the brain, such as language and the ability of sense(感觉). They believe that you begin to create a memory when you notice something with your senses. Then, messages are sent to different brain cells, which join together to form connections. A new connection goes into your short-term memory. It is stored there for about 30 seconds, and then it is lost or stored in your long-term memory.

Having a good memory means making lots of connections and store them in your long-term memory. To do this, you need to keep your brain in good shape. Eat lots of brain food such as fish oil, fruit and vegetables. Laughter also makes your brain more active. Also, don't forget to exercise. So do some sports or just move around a lot in the house. Finally, get lots of sleep. This will make your memories grow stronger.

When you want to remember new information, you must pay special attention. Use your senses—sight, smell, hearing and touch—and keep repeating the information. To do well in your exam this year, turn off the TV, silence your mobile phone, and review your work regularly. To remember something special, use your imagination to create visual(视觉的) connections. For example, you need to take a pencil, an eraser, your ID card and chips to your next exam. Imagine the ID card as the body of an animal, the pencil its long neck, and the eraser its head. Your animal is hungry, so now imagine it eating a bag of chips. It may sound crazy, but it's fun and it works. Another way is to do something different to your room. Turn a picture upside-down, or tie a sock around the door handle(把手) to remind yourself of something to remember!

42. At the beginning, the writer gives an example to _____.
 A. lead into the topic of the article B. show the importance of chalk
 C. let readers remember the word D. make readers know his favorite
43. How many ways are mentioned to have a good memory in paragraph 3?
 A. 2 B. 3 C. 4 D. 5

44. The main idea of the third paragraph is _____.
 A. how to do well in exams
 B. how to remember new information
 C. why to review your work
 D. what to eat to make memories stronger
45. Which of the following is true according to the passage?
 A. Memory has nothing to do with languages.
 B. Laughter can help to improve our memory.
 C. A picture of eating chips is the most useful.
 D. Our brain is difficult to keep in good shape.
