Let me tell you about a young boy who made a model car all on his own. The boy is me, six years ago when I was just 11. The car was small and simple, but in my imagination it was a high-speed racing car, speeding along the race road.

It was during the school summer holidays and workmen were building a new driveway and garage (车库) beside our house. It meant to add something new to our home. When I watched the workmen, I came up with an idea—I would build a car to drive into the garage in celebration of it. I told my mother and began with my plans. But I couldn't find the right things for making the car, so I gave up and sadly spent several days doing nothing. My mother noticed that I had stopped working and asked me why. I explained and she suggested that maybe I should change my plan to fit the things I had, rather than give up.

And that's just what I did. I found small pieces of wood in my father's workshop and made my car from anything that was lying around the house. When I found a small engine (发动机) from one of my old model planes, I added that. The power came from a battery (电池) I found in a box.

By the time the garage was finished, so was my car. I called my family together outside the house, started the engine and put the car on the driveway. It was fast and I had to run to the garage to prevent it from hitting the new door. My family began to cheer and I smiled proudly. Thanks to my mother I learned the value of continuing to do things, especially something difficult. Soon I was making plans for my next project: a robot!

If Tomb Sweeping Day (清明节) gives you a holiday to go outdoors, spring break is what teenagers in the US look forward to.

Unlike our semester, which starts in late February or early March this year, American schools begin as early as January. So in late March and April, most American schools, ranging from kindergartens to colleges, give students one to two weeks off school.

What do students do during the time? They like to do many things, but they all hate studying!

Some kids take trips with their parents, visiting a new state or even a new country. There is one place in the US that all kids dream about going to on their spring break—Disney World in Florida. For some kids that dream will come true. They'll get to meet Mickey Mouse.

For many, spring break means relaxing or family reunions (团聚). They may stay home, read and watch movies, or they may go to visit friends. Others may travel to visit family members who live far away.

Sometimes teachers lead overseas trips for groups of students. On a ten-day trip, for example, students may go on a tour through Spain, France and Italy. These trips are often expensive, but they give students a great chance to see other parts of the world.

Students in the US don't have their spring break at the same time. It depends on where they live. So while students from one town are on vacation, their neighbors in the next town may have classes as usual.

One day, a hunter went into the forest to hunt.

Suddenly, he saw a bear walking on a thin ledge (山崖) on the side of the mountain. Just at that time, from the other side of the ledge, a small bear had started walking across. The hunter didn't think the two bears could cross the ledge at the same time. He thought when they came face to face, they would fight and both would fall into the valley. What a waste! He wanted to shoot (射击) one of them in order to save the other, but he was afraid that the noise of the gun would probably scare (使受惊) the other and both would fall and die. He could only wait and watch.

As the bears came face to face, they stopped and started to talk to each other. The hunter waited for them to start fighting. To his surprise, the big bear sat down and allowed the small bear to climb his back and cross over. Then the big bear got up and walked across the ledge.
