I had the strangest dream last night. I was walking down a dirty road. The road seemed to go on forever. I was all 56 . I couldn't see another person anywhere.

57 , I saw someone walking towards me. As this person got closer and closer, I realized that it was me. It was me 58 many years ago, strong and young. I could see in his 59 all the dreams and hopes that he had too. After all, they had once been my own. I was 60 . I had so many things I wanted to say to this 61 person. I wanted to spare him the pain I had suffered (遭受), and the mistakes I had made. I wanted to share 62 him all that I had learned over the long years of my life. I wanted to show him 63 his life would become so much differently than what he had thought. I wanted him not to 64 so many years on the things that he thought were so important. But instead to realize that love was the most important thing in this life. I opened my 65 to say all of these things but couldn't. I realized at that moment 66 I told him he wouldn't believe me. He would have to walk the road I had walked, learn the things I had 67 , and go through all I had gone through. I let him walk on by and watched as he disappeared on the road. Then I turned to continue on my own way and then 68 up.

In this life there are no shortcuts (捷径). We all have to walk the road. We all have to travel through sadness and joy. We all have to learn to 69 others and ourselves. We all have to grow into who we were meant to be. It takes our whole 70 . Yet, it is a journey worth making.

You may have returned to your hometown and enjoyed your family reunion(团圆) during the Spring Festival.

But then you found yourself surprised to see that your really hard-working mother left dirty dishes, your father good at cooking forgot to put some salt in the meal, and your parents walked slowly but they made their efforts to keep up with you. That's when you started to realize your parents are getting older and older, and you feel worried about them.

A student jumping along on the road might recall some of your childhood memories. When you were at primary school, your parents came to take you home after school every day, perhaps with a gift such as your favorite candy, toy tiger or ice cream. They tried to give you almost everything you actually looked forward to as much as they could.

For some of you, who may have had a dream of becoming a pianist, your parents could have always been pinching and scraping without wasting a single cent to offer you a good piano and education.

Children often take their parents for granted(理所当然) as we do with the sun, the trees or the moon. However, it will be too late to regret when children suddenly lose their parents and then realize what that loss really means.

A web user said in a post that during the holiday he traveled with his father, whose dreams of traveling the world were dampened(抑制) by pressure from family members when he was a young man. At the same time, another young woman took her parents to get their first wedding photos done, satisfying her aging mother.

Now is the time to show your love and care for your parents' needs and dreams. Let's start from now on.

Sam and Harry

One fine summer afternoon, Sam was walking home from school after having classes. He went along slowly, reading a book carefully. Sam had spent all his money on the book but he was happy to read it.

At last he came into the road, where there was a gate. A blind man stood there, holding it open. The poor man said, "Please give me a few cents to buy some bread!" But Sam gave him nothing.

What! Did Sam give the poor blind man nothing? Yes, for, as I told you, he had spent all his money on the book. So Sam walked on, very sad. Soon after, a fine carriage(马车) came up, and in it were Harry and his mother.

The blind man stood, and held out his hat. "Let us give the poor man something," said Harry to his mother. His mother agreed and gave him some cents. Harry took them, but did not put them into the man's hat. He threw them into the hedge (篱笆) as far as he could. The poor man could not find them, for, you know, he was blind.

Sam had turned back to look at the fine carriage. He saw Harry throw the cents into the hedge, so he came back at once, and looked for the money till he found it for the blind man. He put all the money in the blind man's hands then walked away. This took so long a time that he almost lost his supper.

Which of the boys do you think was truly kind to the poor man? I know which he thanked most in his heart.

(D)

It's very important to understand that we can do better if there is no safety net. Plan B (备选计划) becomes a safety net. It says that "if I fail then I fall but I have something else there that will protect me" and that's not good. 86 For example, people perform better in sports and in everything else if they don't have a Plan B.

I hate Plan B, because every thought that you put into Plan B, you're taking away that thought and that energy from Plan A. I've never had a Plan B. 87 Because you're cutting yourself off from the chance of really succeeding. And the main reason why people want to have a Plan B is because they are worried about failing. What if I fail then I don't have anything else? Don't be afraid of failing, because there's nothing wrong with failing.

88 Michael Jordan said in one of his interviews, when they said "you're unbelievable", "you're the greatest basketball player of all times, and he says "well, you just mentioned the successes. For me, to become the greatest basketball player, I missed 9,000 shots when I was playing basketball in the NBA games." 89 Does it make him a failure? No. He is a great basketball player forever, though he failed 9,000 times! Do you get it? We all fail! It's okay.

90 You always get up, that is a winner. So, relax. It's okay to fail. Don't be afraid to fail! 从方框中选择适当的句子,补全短文。其中有一个选项是多余的。(5分)

A. There's no one that doesn't fail.

B. Because people perform better when there's no safety net.

C. To me, it is very dangerous to have a Plan B.

D. Winners will fail and get up, fail and get up, fail and get up.

E. Why you're doing things the way you're doing them.

F. So, during these games that he was so successful, and he missed 9000 shots.

We all know that Britain and the US are two countries connected by a common language. But in fact, the differences are more fun to study, as BBC did in a recent story called 8 Situations When Britons Behave Differently From Americans. We have picked out four for you. Take a look.

1. When someone knocks into you

If someone knocks into an American, the victim (受害者) will probably look at the aggressor (冒失者) in the face and expect an expression of regret. If, however, the victim happens to be British, the victim will say "sorry" before the other person says it.

2. When you get dressed for dinner

Britons don't all change into evening dresses for supper like what you may have seen in popular TV shows. But they do try to make an effort when going out for dinner somewhere nice. Americans, however, will probably wear a common shirt to a nice restaurant.

3. When you don't finish your food

Britons wouldn't think to take the leftovers home when dining out at a restaurant. They think the food is somehow "tainted(污染的)" because they've stuck at it with a knife and fork. But in the US, packing it up to take home is a custom.

4. When you get into a taxi

Britons will give the taxi driver an address, then they don't say anything with the driver before it's time to pay. Sometimes they're being taken in a wrong way, they don't like to say anything, either. In the US, however, most passengers will tell the driver which way to go after telling him or her the address.

根据短文内容,回答下列问题。(10分)

91. How many situations does the passage show us about different behaviors?

92. Who will say sorry first if someone knocks into a Briton, the victim or the aggressor?

93. What will Americans probably wear to a nice restaurant?

94. Why do Britons think the leftover food is tainted?

95. When will most Americans tell the driver which way to go after they get on the taxi?

Cindy was scared when Mike, the owner of the car, saw her standing beside his car. Knowing that she had waited in the hot sun for one hour and she was from a poor family, he was deeply moved. He told her that she didn't need to pay any money for the car. Hearing the words, Cindy bowed at once and thanked Mike deeply.

John was the boss of the factory where Mike worked. After hearing what had happened, he was also deeply moved. John told the story to his workers and praised Mike, "You are a kind and good worker."
