1. F: Did you hear what the teacher said at the end of the class?

M: No. It was just too noisy in the classroom then.

F: She asked us to hand in our homework on Friday, so let's discuss it together.

M: Just a moment. I'm afraid it's too noisy here too.

F: We can go to the library then.

M: It is too late now. I'm afraid it's already closed.

F: Why don't we go to the garden?

M: A good idea.

Question: Where will they probably talk about their homework?

2. M: Look, Lily. This coffee shop looks nice. Let's go and take a rest in it.

F: OK. Let's get something to drink.

M: There's orange juice, milk, coffee and tea. What would you like?

F: I'd prefer orange juice. What about you, Sam?

M: I feel a little sleepy, so I'll get some coffee. Waiter! A glass of orange juice and a cup of coffee, please.

Question: Why does Sam choose coffee?

3. F: You look unhappy, Tom. What's wrong with you?

M: Yes, I feel depressed.

F: Why? About your school work?

M: No. My parents control every part of my life. What should I do?

F: Perhaps you should tell your parents how you feel. I'm sure they'll understand.

M: You're right, Mary. I think I can have a try. Thank you for your advice.

F: I am going to take part in a speech competition on Shenzhen TV.

M: Don't worry. You can always do better than the other students in our school.

F: But I've never been on TV. Could you help me?

M: Of course. And I think we can go and ask our teacher for help.

F: That's great. Thanks!

M: My pleasure.

Question: What is Andy?

8. F: Sam, You look excited. What's new?

M: I'm going to America as an exchange student.

F: How wonderful! How soon will you go there?

M: In fifteen days. Do you have any advice for me?

F: You'd better search some information about America on the Internet.

M: OK, that may help. Thank you very much.

The most valuable gift I have ever received was a photo album from Kevin. He is my best friend. We were in the same primary school for all six years. We always had a lot of things to talk about. It is wonderful to have such a good friend. However, last summer, Kevin gave me a photo album because he had to move to another city with his parents. "It has photos of the happy moments we had together. I've also written some notes under each photo," he said. I was deeply moved. I put the album beside my bed. I always look at it when I think of Kevin.

One possible version:

Dear classmates,

With the rapid development of Internet, shopping online has already become a fashion, especially among young people. Comparing with the traditional shopping, shopping online has advantages. First, we can do shopping without leaving our home. It saves our time. Besides, the goods on line are usually cheaper. Also, we can choose more varieties of goods.

However, shopping on the internet also has its disadvantages. It's hard to tell whether the goods are good because we cannot see them with our eyes. Besides, it's not safe to pay online sometimes, since our passwords may leak out.

In my opinion, shopping online will be surely become our lifestyles. We need to control ourselves by shopping only what we need but not what are cheap.

Let's stop buying blindly but be a smart consumer. Thank you.
