An app that does nothing but send a simple message of “Yo” to other users is the most popular app right now in the US.

The app, named Yo, is created in just eight hours by Or Arbel, a 32-year-old app inventor. He says “Yo is to be the ‘simplest but strongest communication tool in the world’. With a single button, users can send the word “Yo” to one another with a voice notification — and nothing else. It’s a whole new way for communication. A hundred and forty characters is in some way too much these days... It’s easy. You don’t have to open a message — the notification itself is everything you need.”

David Shapiro, from The New Yorker, says now when he thinks about someone, he just “Yo” them instead of spending time talking with them on line. He says it’s a great way of saying: “I’m thinking about you, but I don’t have anything special to say.”

It also expressed something deeper. Andrew Leonard, from The Salon, says that the word “Yo” means that I exist in this world and it’s also like saying: “Yo... I am here. Is anybody out there?”

50. Who invented “Yo”, the popular app?

A. Or Arbel.

B. A man called Yo.

C. Andrew Leonard.

D. David Shapiro.
51. From the passage, we know that we can “Yo” to our friend_____.

A. by talking on line

B. with 140 characters

C. with a voice notification

D. by talking to the mobile phone
52. What might be the best reason why the app became popular?

A. It’s easy and cheap.

B. It could express something deeper.

C. It’s simple to use but strong in communication.

D. It’s a great way of saying “I’m thinking about you”.

It’s five minutes before the exam and you are in a state of feeling bad. You just have to pass it, but how? You hear a voice in your head keep saying “Cheat, cheat ...” So what are you going to do, let it be and fail or go for it? It’s a hard decision many students must make.

Most young people believe that cheating is wrong. However, they have cheated at least once in their high school years. So, why do they do it? Are they too lazy to study? Perhaps, but it’s not as simple as that. According to some experts(专家), one main reason why students cheat is that they see their friends get away with it. It’s an easy way out. They won’t be troubled with bad feelings themselves and their parents’ anger for not doing well in an exam. Another reason is that students think it’s OK to cheat if the subject isn’t important for their future. What’s more, most students have to put up with the pressure of getting into university. They need to get good marks to carry on with their studies. This means that there will always be students who will do anything for a better mark.

It has never been easier to cheat than it is today. With all the technology tools, students needn’t cheat by looking over their shoulders any more. They use mobile phones to send answers to each other during a test. There is also the Internet. With hundreds of websites, students can find lots of material which they can copy and use. There are even tips on the art of cheating in exams.

Obviously, if you get caught cheating, you fail the exam or the subject. But it doesn’t really matter whether you get caught or not. What’s important is that it’s wrong. You mustn’t cheat because cheating is a lie. It wrongly leads you into thinking you know more than you actually do. How can you be proud of something you have got through cheating? In the end, it’s not about fooling your teachers and your parents, but about yourself.

53. Which of the following is the main reason for students’ cheating?

- A. The subjects are too difficult for them.
- B. They are too lazy to study before exams.
- C. Cheating can help them to please themselves and their parents.
- D. Cheating can help them get good marks and they can go away with it.

54. The worst thing about cheating is that _____.
- A. you cheat others and yourself
 - B. your parents will be angry about you
 - C. you may get caught and fail the exam
 - D. your parents will not allow you to use the Internet

55. What is the purpose of the passage?
- A. To list the reasons why students cheat.
 - B. To introduce different ways of cheating.
 - C. To explain how cheating is now common and easy to do.
 - D. To warn the readers of the fact cheating is actually telling lies.

Here is the last letter from Jim, a war reporter, to his family and friends:

Dear Family and Friends,

I remember going to the Mall with Dad, a very long bike ride with Mom. I remember so many great family times that take me away from this prison.

I know you are thinking of me and praying (祈祷) for me. And I am so thankful. I feel you all especially when I pray. I pray for you to stay strong and to be happy. I really feel I can touch you even in this darkness when I pray.

Eighteen of us have been held together in one cell (牢房), so we have had each other to have endless long conversations about movies, chores, and sports. We have found ways to play chess, and games.... The games and teaching each other have helped the time pass. They have been a huge help. We repeat stories and laugh to break the tension (紧张).

I have had weak and strong days. We are so grateful when anyone is freed; but of course, yearn for our own freedom. We try to encourage each other and share strength. We are being fed better now and daily. We have tea, sometimes coffee. I have put on most of my weight back lost last year.

I think a lot about my brothers and sister. I remember playing Werewolf in the dark with Michael and so many other adventures. I think of chasing(追逐) Mattie around the kitchen counter. It makes me happy to think of them. If there is any money left in my bank account, I want it to go to Michael and Matthew. I am so proud of you, Michael and thankful to you for happy childhood memories.

And Mark..., so proud of you too. I think of you on the West coast and hope you are doing some snowboarding and camping, I especially remember us going to the Comedy Club in Boston together and our big hug after. The special moments keep me hopeful.

Katie, so very proud of you. You are the strongest and best of us all!! I think of you working so hard, helping people as a nurse. I am so glad we texted just before I was shut here. I pray I can come to your wedding.... Stay strong because I am going to need your help to change my life.

Jim

56. According to Paragraph 3, Jim _____.
- A. loves talking a lot about movies, chores and sports
 - B. tries different ways to ease tension with others
 - C. likes to tell the old stories again and again
 - D. often plays chess and games for fun

57. The underlined part “yearn for” in Paragraph 4 probably means “_____”.

八、阅读与表达（共 10 分， 每小题 2 分）

阅读短文， 根据其内容回答问题。

There are many courses, both online and off, that can show you how to increase speed reading, but there are several things that you can do to increase the speed at which you read without spending any money. Improving your reading can also lead to better understanding of what you read, although some say that reading too quickly will cut down the amount that you will actually take in.

Reading is something that we all have to be able to do in our daily lives and there are some simple things that we can do to make our reading easier. Understanding should also improve as the following tips not only allow for better reading but a better understanding of what you read.

Do your reading somewhere that you find comfortable and with as few distractions (分心的事物) as possible. Reading at home may not be possible because of family chores will keep troubling you. The town library is a quiet place to read if you cannot find the peace that you need at home.

Try and read when your mind is most acceptable. The most of people read better in the morning after having a good night sleep as the body is more rested at this time of day. You may need to experiment a little to find out at what time reading is the best for you as we all have our own more favorable conditions.

Reading in a poorly lit room and at uncomfortable angles(角度) is not good for reading speed or comprehension. Turn a light on and improve your posture (姿势) for more comfortable reading. Tests show that having whatever you are reading at about forty five degrees is best for most people.

This advice is pretty much common sense but does show you how to increase speed reading and comprehension by following some basic concepts(概念).

- 64. Can we do anything to increase reading speed without spending any money?
- 65. Where can we find a quiet place for reading if our home is not peaceful?
- 66. How can we find out the best time for doing reading?
- 67. At what angle can we do our reading best?
- 68. What is the passage mainly about?

十、文段表达（共 15 分）

74. One possible version:

Good morning, everyone,

When talking about modern media, I watch TV almost every day. There are all kinds of programs on it almost at anytime of the day. One day I learned from the TV news that the children in the earthquake area didn’t have enough books to read. So I collected about 200 books from my classmates and my own bookcase and posted them to the area.

I think if we keep watching TV for news both in English and in Chinese, we can benefit a lot from TV. But if we watch too much TV of cartoons or soap operas, we’ll become couch potatoes, and then TV will harm our health.
