In America and England, if you go to a birthday party, you'll have a good meal and a lot of drinks. After that, you will play different kinds of games.

The children between the age of 10—14 will have a “sleep-over” party.

Usually this kind of party is on a Friday or a Saturday night when the children do not have lessons the next morning. For this kind of party, the birthday person invites 5—6 close friends over for dinner. After dinner, the children will eat cakes and ice-cream, and the birthday person will open his or her gifts.

During the evening, the children may go ice-skating, go to watch basketball or soccer games or something else. Also, the children will eat pancakes at midnight and then go on talking and playing games, such as card games or computer games. Next morning the mother will make a big breakfast of some nice food such as cakes, bread with meat or eggs. Then their parents will pick up the children at about nine o'clock the next morning.
