The food in Britain is very different from our Chinese food. For example(例如), they eat a lot of potatoes. They like to eat them every day. They usually eat bread for breakfast. They eat their bread with butter, cheese or jam (果酱), and those are things we don't eat much in China. Cheese and butter are made from (由...制成) milk. They drink a lot of milk, too. They drink cold or hot milk, and they put it in their tea. They put sugar in their tea as well. They may be the world's biggest tea drinkers. They like Chinese tea, but they drink mostly strong black tea from India and Sri Lanka. They don't eat much rice. For their main meal (主餐), they like meat or fish with potatoes and some vegetables. They eat all these together. After the main meal, they always have something sweet. They call it dessert (甜点). They don't eat dumplings in Britain.
