A 3-year-old boy who was lost in the forest for about two days is now safe at home with his family. The child went missing on January 22 while playing with friends at his grandmother's house. When the other children returned to the house, Casey did not, and the family looked for him almost an hour before calling the police.

Police formed (建立) a search and rescue (营救) team to look for the young boy in the nearby forest. But two days went by and they still didn't find the boy. Then on January 24, someone called the police saying they heard a child crying in the forest. Police followed up on the information and found Casey in some trees at about 9:30 that night. He was in good health. Casey told the rescuers that he was with a black bear for two days, a bear he called his "friend".

Hundreds of people helped in the search. There were about 600 volunteers (志愿者), police and members of the military (军队).

Doctors examined Casey and gave him some medicine. Then he went back to his family on January 25. His mother Brittany Hathaway talked with reporters from a local newspaper and thanked everyone who joined the search for her son. "We just want to tell everybody that we're very thankful that you spent the time looking for Casey, and he's good now," said his mother.

Do you know about the secrets of pandas?

It is reported that there are only less than 2,000 pandas living in the wild and in the zoo. All of the world's pandas come from China! Among them, 1,367 are living in Sichuan.

For pandas' food, 99% is bamboo, but it is not their only food. They also have some meat, vegetables, fruits, and some favourite sweets.

Pandas defecate (排便) 40 times a day! Their excrement (粪便) is clean. Some gifts are made from the excrement, and some baby pandas even eat the excrement of their mothers.

This animal was first known by the western people in 1869 when a French teacher got a black-and-white fur (毛皮). Every year, the United States pay one million dollars for renting (出租) pandas to stay in the zoos in Atlanta, Washington, San Diego, and Memphis.

When a baby panda is born in a foreign country, Fedex will send it back to China at once. Newly-born (新出生的) pandas are like small pink mice (鼠), and they are only 85g to 150g. However, they will grow to 40kg in the first year, and become adults (over 100kg) in five years.

It has the sixth "finger" on each of its feet. Five fingers of them can help it firmly hold the bamboo, and climb the tree. An adult has a white tail. It's usually about 20cm long. It's hard for people to notice the pandas' tails.

51. How many pandas are living in Sichuan?
A. 2,000. B. 1,367. C. More than 700. D. Less than 700.
52. What food do pandas eat most?

A. Englishmen. B. Frenchmen. C. Americans. D. Australians.
54. What colour is the newly-born panda?
A. White. B. Black. C. Pink. D. White and black.
55. How many "fingers" does a panda have?
A. 5. B. 6. C. 20. D. 24.

C

Playing video games can be a fun way to relax or spend time with friends. In schools, teachers use games to improve students' abilities to think, imagine and encourage (鼓励) teamwork.

But for some players, gaming has become an unhealthy habit (习惯). They always look at a screen and do badly in schoolwork.

The video-game world feels like a friendlier place than the real one.

Mental (心理的) health experts (专家) have noticed too much video gaming could be bad for kids' mental health. In June, the WHO added gaming disorder (游戏紊乱症) to its list of health problems. According to WHO, the disorder can be known if gaming has made a bad difference to relationships with family and friends.

Not all experts agree with WHO's decision to call gaming too much a disorder. They say people who are crazy about video games may have other mental health problems that should be treated (治疗) first.

Others think WHO made the right decision. A scientist says kids often feel worried and lonely. They get angry when a parent stops them from playing games. It becomes a self-destructive (自毁的) activity.

One key to healthy gaming is to know about how long you play. Sussman suggests taking at least an hour-long break after every hour of play. That gives the brain (大脑) time to rest.

Teachers can help too, by keeping an eye on students' behaviour. School is an excellent place for finding gaming disorder.
