When you walk on the street, you may find cat coffee shops. What is a "cat coffee shop"? Well, it is a cafe that has cats. You can touch and play with the cats while drinking coffee.

It seems that there are more pet cats around us today. And that's true. There are around 60 million pet cats in China, according to the National Bureau of Statistics (国家统计局). The number of cat owners (主人) in China is the second-largest in the world after the United States. One important reason is that more young people are keeping cats. Maybe that's because cats are clean pets and you don't have to walk them. More cats bring more jobs. Many people now work at pet shops and hospitals.

But cats can be problems, too. Some people abandon (抛弃) their cats. The cats become homeless. They have no home to stay and have to find food by themselves. They can pass on diseases (疾病). They even hunt and kill other animals like birds and frogs. In Japan and Australia, the government (政府) takes homeless cats to animal hospitals. Doctors operate (做手术) on them. These cats can't have babies. This way, the number of cats will be less.

59. What does underlined "homeless" meaning in Chinese?
