My father and I 37 on a gray, windy morning on a small boat. However, the sky turned blue ten minutes later. Soon we reached the swimming place. To my 38, this was more than 40 km from land. I was quite cold by the time, and wondered 39 we came there. Suddenly someone shouted "Dolphins!"

All I could see were fins (鳍) 40 — there were about one hundred dolphins swimming towards our boat! Many of them were jumping around in the water. I put on my snorkel (潜水通气管) and 41 into the sea. Then I tried to make 42 in the water to attract them. They heard me and came to swim 43 me. Amazingly, a dolphin kept following me, 44 then changed his mind and swam in another direction. How intelligent they are!

About an hour later, it was time to get back onto the boat. I 45 enjoyed myself, but I was a little cold and decided to leave the water. I noticed that everyone on the board was smiling and I realized what a very special moment we'd had.

When you argue (争辩) with your friend, will you shout at him or her? Why or why not?

A wise old man saw his grandson having an argument with his wife. He asked his grandson,

"Why do you raise your voice every time you argue with your wife?"

His grandson answered, "I raise my voice so that my voice is heard."

"Your wife is close enough for her to hear you when you say the same sentence in a calm manner? Why do you have to raise your voice?" the grandfather asked.

"Perhaps because I need to let off some steam (宣泄感情) by raising my voice," his grandson replied.

"The steam will go out in the same way if you whisper to her. So why is that?"

"Or because I lose my patience (耐心) when she doesn't understand my point of view," the man said unwillingly.

"Perhaps, but that is not the real reason why you raise your voice. The real reason is that when YOU are angry with your wife, your heart moves away from her heart. So even though you are physically close to each other, you feel that you are far away from one another. You feel like you have to shout," the grandfather replied.

"So what should I do to solve this?" the grandson asked.

Food waste is a big problem. About one-quarter of the world's food is unharvested or thrown away.

Some food suppliers want to stop food waste. They have promised to cut their food waste by half before 2030. They have joined a special project. The project is called 10x20x30. Companies from many countries are taking part. Nearly 200 food suppliers have signed up for 10x20x30. A lot of food suppliers are big companies.

Food waste is bad for the environment. It causes climate change. Climate change is also called global warming. Climate change is caused by greenhouse gases. These gases come from the burning of natural fuels like oil, gas and wood. Making food produces greenhouse gases. It would help the environment if we only made the food we need.

It is not just big companies that create waste. People waste a lot of food, too. ReFED is a nonprofit (非盈利) company. It is working to end food waste. Scientists at ReFED studied where food is most often wasted. The study showed that about 15% of waste happens on farms and producers waste about 2% of food. About 43% food waste happens at home. And 40% food is wasted by restaurants. So waste occurs (发生) throughout the supply chain (链), with nearly 85% occurring at consumer-facing (面向消费者的) businesses and homes.

Brian Roe teaches at Ohio State University. He works to stop food waste. He says there are a lot of ways to reduce food waste. Producers can do more. They can even stop people from throwing food away. Smaller serving sizes would help. They could also put more information on the packets. Roe says it is a good thing that big food producers want to help. He's hoping the companies can work together. If they work as a team, they will be able to do more. They can help each other learn what's working. They can tell each other what's not working, too. This will keep more food out of landfills at the end.

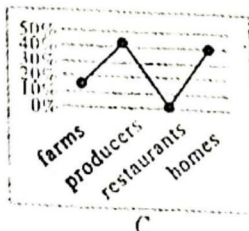

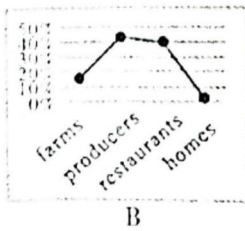

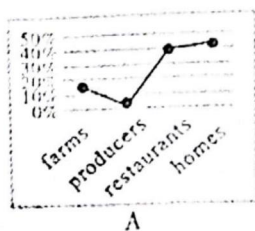

56. Some food suppliers join 10x20x30 to _____.

- A. make the most food waste
- B. reduce food waste
- C. sell more food products
- D. make more money

57. What is Paragraph 3 mainly about?

Dear Michael,

I took part in the CPR training in our school today. I can't wait to share some first aid knowledge with you.

First, ask the person if he is OK. Second, if he stops breathing, you should call 120 for help at once and take out AED. Third, press the patient's chest for thirty times. Then open his mouth to check if there is something in his mouth or nose. After that, use mouth-to-mouth way to start his breathing for twice. Finally, use AED to give first aid. Remember to tell the other people to keep away from the patient.

If we know about the CPR, we can save people's lives. It's necessary for us to master it.

Yours,

Li Ming
