Dear Mike,

I found out that my mother was reading my diary secretly while I was out. I felt like she violated(侵犯) my privacy. We had a big fight. What should I do?

Ella

Question

Dear Ella,

First off, I agree that your mom did violate your privacy, and it's not very nice of her to do that. I can understand why you're upset; I would be too. However, the situation is a bit more complicated (复杂的) than that.

As you progress through childhood, you will gain more responsibilities—but you will also gain more rights. However, as long as you remain under your parents' roof, they will have the final say in things. If they want to go snooping (窥探) through your room, you can't do much to stop them.

What you can do instead is to show them how mature you are by politely asking for some privacy. You can go to your mom and calmly explain to her that what she did violated your privacy and made you feel bad. Hopefully, she will understand and apologize.

Mike

Answer 1

Dear Ella,

Your mother is not the only mom who reads her child's diary. When I was in Junior 1, I also found my mom reading my diary when she was helping me clean my room. I felt sad and disappointed.

So I talked with my mom directly and asked for more freedom. My mother told me, "You talk less about yourself now. I Just want to know what is going on in your life and make sure you are safe." At that moment, I understood her worries.

Since then, I've been talking more with my mom to narrow the gap between us. She lets me keep my own secrets. I have started writing in English and using illustrations(图画) in my diary because my parents can't tell what they mean. Arguing doesn't solve problems. Try to understand and find your own way to deal with it.

Yu Haihui, 15, Zhejiang

- I was lying in bed yesterday afternoon after a big dinner. The television had nothing on that interested me. The book I was trying to read seemed boring too. Finally I put the book on my chest(胸膛), closed my eyes, and let myself take a nap.
- Suddenly, I felt a huge, wet tongue lick my face. My eyes opened and I saw our dog Fluffy standing there looking at me.
- I smiled and touched his head. After a bit, I got up and we headed outside. The sun was breaking through the clouds and finally warming the cool air a bit. I laughed as I let him drag(拖拉) me around the backyard.
- He sniffed(嗅) the grass,peed(尿) on a tree,and then took in the daily dog news with his nose when the breeze(微风)picked up. After we went back inside,we played fetch in the hallway for a while. Then he jumped up on my bed and decided to take a nap of his own. It seemed like even while he slept, our beloved dog never found life boring.
- I think we all could learn a lot from Fluffy. In this life, there is time for napping and time for playing. There is time for reading and time for doing. There is time for giving laughing, and sharing. There is time to sing, to smile, to hug, and to dance. There is time to walk your dog and smell the flowers in the breeze. But there is never time to be bored. We only get a certain amount of time to live. Don't waste a second of it on boredom.
31. The author took a nap because _____.
A. she had just had a big dinner B. she felt very tired after cooking
C. she felt everything was boring D. the weather was not nice outside

32. What does the word “lick” mean in Chinese?
A. 咬 B. 舔 C. 吸 D. 喝
33. What did the author do with her dog?
A. They read newspapers in the yard. B. They played a game called fetch.
C. They took a nap on her bed. D. They smelled the flowers in the breeze.
34. How might the author feel after walking her dog?
A. Upset. B. Happy. C. Bored. D. Disappointed.
35. What did the author learn from Fluffy?
A. We should try to enjoy our short lives.
B. We have very short lives.
C. Walking a dog is a waste of time.
D. It’s an excuse to say you don’t have any time.

C

When the Internet became popular, people thought that it would ruin(毁灭)English. We would stop spelling words correctly. We would write “u” instead of “you” and“btw” instead of “by the way”even in important papers. We would stop following the rules of English, and soon we would forget them.

So far, that isn’t true. The Internet isn’t ruining English. In fact, it’s making it grow and change. Many new words come from the Internet. A lot are in the dictionary now. Merriam-webster has thousands of them, like “clickbai(标题党)” and “vlog”.

The Internet is creating new forms of grammar too. Now, you can “do a help” to help someone. Or you can explain that something happens “because science”. Thanks to the Internet, everyone will understand you.

Not long ago,people only talked to locals(本地人). They didn’t often hear English of other dialects(方言). Today, people talk to one another on the Internet. They learn English of other dialects. Later, they use it in the American South, people always say “y’all” to talk to more than one person. Now, people say “y’all” everywhere.

People also create new dialects on the Internet. Everyone on a certain website will speak and understand its dialect. Each dialect has its own vocabulary too. You might say “smh” when you don’t agree with someone or “derp” when you feel stupid.

The Internet is changing how we talk to one another. That can only make English more interesting.

36. Why did some people think the Internet would ruin English?
A. Because people would create many new words.
B. Because people wouldn’t spell words correctly.
C. Because people would create new forms of grammar.
D. Because people wouldn’t pronounce the word correctly.

37. The word “clickbait” may come from the _____.
A. dictionary B. dialect C. Internet D. textbook
38. If you have a different opinion about something, you can use _____ to express (表达).
A. vlog B y’all C smh D. bty
39. The underlined word “derp” probably means _____.
A. What a fool! B. That’s great!
C. What a pity D. That’s impossible!
40. What is the best title of the passage?
A. How to keep safe on the Internet
B How the Internet is ruining English
C How to learn English on the Internet
D. How the Internet is changing English

From Nov 1 to Dec 10,if someone knocks at your door and wants to ask you some questions,don’t be afraid. They are working on the seventh national population census (普查). They will ask each family about their name, gender, age, education, and employment(职业).

China has a census every 10 years. The first one was done in 1953. At that time, there were about 600 million people in China. Throughout the decades, China’s population has boomed. It was about 1. 37 billion in 2010 according to the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS).

For this year’s census,China will send 7 million staff (工作人员) to visit far miles across the country. All residents(居民) of China will be included in the census. But Chinese citizen who have settled(定居) abroad and foreign citizens who are staying in China on either business or tourist visas(签证) will not be counted,CGTN noted.

“The census is very important for every citizen,” said Ning Jizhe, director of the NBS. “It will help improve infrastructure(基础设施建设) and public services.” For example, if census results show that there are many children living in a particular area, the government will know that it should build more schools there.

Scientists can also learn more about population growth from the census. In some years, the population grows faster than in others. Even in the same year, population growth is different in different places. Scientists can use the information to figure out what causes growth in certain years and places.

41. When was the fifth national population census done?
A. In 1953. B. In 1964. C. In 2000. D. In 2010.

42. What does “boom” in Paragraph 2 mean?
A. drop B. include C. measure D. increase
43. Which of the following will be included in this year’s census?
A. Chinese residents who are traveling abroad.
B. People who have settled in other countries.
C. Foreigners staying in China with business visas.
D. Foreign tourists staying in China for over a month.
44. What do the last two paragraphs explain?
A. How scientists will use the census to do research.
B. How people should prepare for the census.
C. How people can take part in the census.
D. Why it is important to do the census.
45. The main idea of the passage is about _____.
A. the population in China
