Do you know what China's national flower is? It's still unclear. Plum (梅) flower is considered as one of the Chinese Top Ten Famous Flowers. Plum flower is very important for Chinese people because of its history and cultural meaning.

Plum flower first appeared in the south of China around the Yangtze River dating back to 7,000 years ago. It was introduced to Japan, Korea and Vietnam.

More importantly, we love plum flower also because of its deep cultural meaning. Firstly, this kind of flower has five petals (花瓣) which stand for happiness, good luck, long life, safety and peace. Secondly, all the other flowers fall when a heavy snow covers the world. But only plum trees stand straight up, proudly bloom in rich colors bringing people the news of early spring. So the plum flower is not only the symbol of courage, strong will and hope, but also beauty and new life. Thirdly, it plays an important role in Chinese literature (文学). When you and your family go out for dinner, do you notice how many dishes you usually order? It's fine if you finish all of them. But if you waste too much food, you might pay a fee for it in the near future.

On Dec. 22, 2020, a draft law (法律草案) for stopping food waste was reviewed (审议) for the first time. In general, a draft will become a law after it was reviewed three times.

According to the draft law, restaurants should tell diners not to order too much. They should describe the size or amount of each dish. If customers leave too much food uneaten, restaurants can make them pay for food waste.

Waiters mustn't encourage diners to order too much food according to the law. Those who don't follow the law will receive a fine (罚款) from 1,000 to 10,000 yuan.

The draft law also asks schools to teach their students to avoid food waste. Besides, livestreams (直播), radio programs and TV programs about overeating and overdrinking are not allowed. Producers of such programs will face a fine of up to 100,000 yuan.
