The Songkran Festival is traditional Thai New Year's Day and is celebrated from April 13 to April 15. It is also called the "Water Festival" because people believe that water will wash away bad luck. Also, this festival is for rain because it is held in the hottest season.

In the past, on this day, people threw small drops of water on monks*(僧侣)and old people to bless them. Nowadays, besides that, people also throw water on whoever walks past their houses or walks down the street. Everyone gets wet, but it is all in a spirit of friendliness, blessing and fun-even among people who usually have great disagreements. People who get wet actually do not get angry because they know that it is a tradition,

On this day, everywhere in Thailand, people celebrate and enjoy the festival. People will carry water to the temples to soak the stone figures using brushes. They also give very good food to the monks. Chiang Mai Province, which is in the northeast of Thailand, is especially lively, and birds are often set free from their cages.

Volunteers can stay in Bangkok for the celebrations or travel to smaller communities to take part in local activities. What's more, people can enjoy public events, such as beauty contests and marching bands during this festival which ends on April 15. In recent years, the number of foreigners in Thailand has increased a lot, especially during the festival.

The Water Festival gives people freshness, happiness and fun during the hottest season. No wonder the Thais like it so much.

29. On Thai New Year's Day, Thai people throw water for the following reasons, EXCEPT _____ .

- | | |
|----------------------------------|------------------------------|
| A. blessing monks and old people | B. praying for rain |

Artificial intelligence (AI) products are not new. However, researchers have been working to improve the technology. Now assistants, like Siri and Alexa, can have short conversations with us. AlphaGo taught itself to play chess and became better than the top human player.

Now an AI system named Aristo has been tasked with passing an exam. The goal is to improve machines' language understanding and logic* (逻辑).

Aristo was developed by the Allen Institute for Artificial Intelligence, a lab in the United States city of Seattle. It recently passed an eighth-grade science exam taken by many US students, The New York Times reported. It correctly answered more than 90 percent of the questions, Then it was given a twelfth-grade exam. It scored more than 80 percent.

It's an example of the progress in AI development. Four years ago, 700 computer scientists tried to develop AI systems that could pass these kinds of exams. None scored higher than 60 percent.

Aristo was able to pass the exams because it can not only understand language but also use logical thinking to solve difficult problems. For example, it can understand what a forest fire is and how it could endanger animals like squirrels or decrease the food supply they need.

The system used BERT, a kind of neural* (神经系统的) network technology developed by Google to answer the questions. BERT has "read" thousands of English articles. If it looks at a sentence with a missing word, it can correctly guess what the word is. With BERT's help, Aristo "read" many questions and answers. Over time, it was able to find the logic on its own.

It may still be in the earliest stages, said Jingjing Liu, a Microsoft researcher who has been working on similar technologies. "We can't compare this technology to real human students and their ability to reason."

However, Aristo's success means that AI systems are getting better at understanding users. and we might see improved search engines and hospital databases* (数据库) in the near future.

33. The scientists designed Aristo so that it can _____ .

- A. help students to pass exams
- B. have conversations with us

C. develop the machines better D. teach AlphaGo to play chess

34. The writer used the numbers in the passage to tell us _____ .

- A. the AI systems have been improved a lot B. many things can be done by AI products
C. Aristo was smarter than many US students D. scientists met more difficulties than before

35. Thanks to _____, Aristo can do well.

- A. a large number of articles in BERT B. Google's answers to the questions
C. the missing words in the sentences D. its ability of knowing different animals

36. What's the best title of the passage?

- A. The Time of AI is Coming! B. Aristo, a Developed AI Product
C. Will AI Replace the Human? D. BERT, a Helpful Neural System

Exactly five years ago, on New Year's Eve, I was invited to a children's party by a man high up in the business world, who had his connections, his circle of friends. So it seemed as though the children's party was only an excuse: for the parents to come together and discuss matters of interest to themselves.

I was an outsider, and as I had no special matters, I was able to spend the evening independently of the others. There was another gentleman present who like me had just found out this happiness. He was the first to attract my attention. His appearance was not that of a man of high-class birth. He was tall, rather thin, very serious, and well dressed. Obviously, he had no heart for the family celebration. The moment he went off into a corner alone, the smile disappeared from his face, and his thick dark brows got into a frown*(皱眉). He knew no one except the host and showed every sign of being bored, though kindly keeping the role of thorough enjoyment to the end. Later I learned that he was a provincial(都城以外的)*, had come to the capital on some important business, had brought a letter to our host, and our host had taken him under his protection, not at all with love. It was only out of politeness that he had invited him to the children's party.

They did not play cards with him. No one entered into conversation with him. Possibly they recognized the bird by its feathers from a distance. Thus, my gentleman, not knowing what to do with his hands, had to spend the evening touching his whiskers*(络腮胡子). His whiskers were really fine, but he touched them so eagerly*(渴望的) that one got the feeling that the whiskers had come into the world first and afterwards the man in order to touch them.

37. According to the author, the real purpose of the children's party was that _____ .

- A. the parents wanted to make their children happy
B. the parents had a chance to meet and communicate

C. the host hoped to make the party better than others

D. the host wanted to give a warm welcome to the guest

38. Which statement is TRUE about the gentleman?

A. he was not from the countryside

B. he was one of the poor relatives of the host

C. he was smiling in front of others in the party

D. he was trying to do some business with the host

39. The gentleman touched his whiskers eagerly because _____.

A. he liked his whiskers very much

B. he wanted to play cards with others

C. he felt uncomfortable in the party

D. he felt the whiskers will be the world first

40. What do you think of the writer? Why? (40- 50 words)
