What will life be like in the future? Many people, magazines and movies have told us that robots will be able to work for us. Although robots can already make cars, play music and do many trivial things for us, in the future, they can do more things, such as making websites, making houses and so on. Some people even believe that in the future with the help of robots, we needn't work.

In the future, people might create a "man" that cannot have a will of his own and has to follow orders only from his master(主人). The master must train him mentally with computers. As you know, an adult who follows the same training over and over again will not be able to change without another training. This means the master can have him work in a factory with no payment. And he will still be happy even if he only gets the basic life—support goods, because it's the way he was trained.

Do you like long holidays? Well, you're going to like the future because machines and robots will do all the heavy and difficult jobs, and we'll only do light and easy work. Working hours will be short so people will have long holidays.

56. Robots can do the following things for humans EXCEPT _____.
 A. making cars B. playing music
 C. doing many trivial things D. making websites
57. What can we know from the passage?
 A. Robots of the future will do everything for us.
 B. In the future, robots can do more things.
 C. Robots of the future will not be respected.
 D. In the future, humans will be lazier and lazier.

58. The “man” that people might produce in the future may be a(n) _____.
 A. teacher B. worker C. engineer D. doctor
59. The underlined word “create” in Paragraph 2 means _____.
 A. carry B. lift C. produce D. draw
60. What will life be like in the future?
 A. Robots will do most heavy and difficult jobs.
 B. People needn't do light and easy work.
 C. Working hours will be short so people will have long holidays.
 D. Robots can replace(取代) people.
