B

Just the other day, I was walking out of the train, busy texting away with my friends, when I felt a gentle tap on my shoulder. I turned around and saw a plain-looking woman. "Your backpack is half open and this fell out." She said, waving my wallet at me. As I reached for my wallet, mumbling an embarrassed "thank you", she smiled, and all of a sudden, she appeared much more beautiful than she did at first glance.

As they say "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder", and to me, a kind soul is beautiful. An act of kindness, however small, is a great virtue.

More importantly, a kind soul does not give to get. They give without expecting any return. Still, their selfless kind deeds often inspire others to give as well.

Such as what we see in Mother Teresa, a Catholic nun and Nobel Laureate who dedicated her entire life to caring for the destitute and dying in the slums of Calcutta. Such, too, is the case we see in COVID-19. We see countless volunteers rushing to Wuhan to offer a helping hand. We see numerous countries offering medical help to Italy when the country was hard-hit by the virus.

When Dena signed up for a free weekend trip to an unknown place, her sister worried she'd have problems.

In fact, the offer was not only real, but also a lot of fun. It was to advertise West Virginia as a perfect place to visit in autumn. The advertisement said next to nothing about the trip. It only suggested wearing heavy clothes and sports shoes.

Mystery trips becoming more popular

In parts of the US, mystery trips have developed quite well recently. Whether travelling by bus, train or plane, these vacations have different costs and take you to different places. Often, organizers give people a general idea about where they're going. Sometimes they don't.

Denise started Magical Mystery Tours 10 years ago. Her company plans hundreds of trips every year.

"The magical thing about a mystery trip is that you don't have control," she said. "Surprises are really fun."

Other companies include Pink Bus Mystery Trips, Pack Up + Go and Surprise Me Trips. Rustic Pathways mainly offers summer group tours.

Mystery is part of the adventure

The group Dena went with enjoyed dinner, nature and horse riding. They visited the towns of Davis and Thomas. They watched musical acts and spent the night at a lovely mountain hotel.

Dena was back home the following night, and her sister didn't have to worry anymore.

"I would certainly do it again," Dena said in an interview. "If I can go on another unknown trip where I'm not planning anything? It's part of the adventure!"
