Each night, mother touched my face with her hands and kissed me before saying good night. As a little child, I thought I was the happiest in the world. But I didn't remember when I started feeling uncomfortable. Maybe she was not young. Or maybe she did too much hard homework. One night, I shouted at her. "Don't do that anymore-your hands are too rough!" She didn't say anything. But she stopped saying good night to me as usual.

Years later, I became a mother, and mom was over seventy, but her rough hands still did things for me and my family. I always thought about that night. I began to understand how sad my mother was when I shouted at her. And I began to miss my mother's hands and her good-night kiss. How I wish I hadn't said those words!

On Thanksgiving Eve, when I slept in the bedroom, a hand touched my face and then a kiss. Oh, that was what I had missed for so many years! Catching mom's hand, I told her how sorry I was for "that night". But mom didn't know what I was talking about. She forgot it long ago.

On Thanks giving Day, I slept with her caring hands.
