Chinese imports have created a large selection of goods in other countries as people begin to buy more and more products made in China. These goods are even widely available in other Asian nations, where Chinese-made goods are quite popular. Chinese brand names are also becoming more well-known outside China.

When Chinese Americans visit family and friends in their homeland, gifts from the US are a must. But TVs and fashionable clothes aren't rare any more, and anything "Made in China" shouldn't be considered in any case.

"When I decide to visit my family members in China, I will have a big headache. What should I buy for them? They may not all speak English, but everyone in China knows those three words, 'a Chinese American said.' When they see the label 'Made in China,' they will think, 'Why do you send me this?'"

The development of China has surprised the world with its growth. As a result, the other countries are beginning to try to reduce Chinese goods with the use of tariff and import restrictions. However, the development on the Chinese economy still affects the world in many ways.

156. Around the world, the products made in China are the shopping malls.

157. Why do Chinese Americans usually have a headache if they come back to China?

158. How do other countries try to reduce the Chinese goods in their own countries?

159. From the passage, we can know that _____.

When Michael Ma died, his three best friends went to his funeral. They stood for a moment, looking down into the grave (坟墓) of their friend. "He was a good friend," the first person said. "He was generous and kind. Let's give him some money to use in heaven. The other two friends agreed. They thought this was a good idea.

The first friend took his wallet out of his pocket, opened it and took out a $100 bill. Then he threw it into the grave.

The second friend did not want the other two to think he was stingy (吝啬的), so he also took out his wallet. "You're right," he said. "He always helped his friends. He should have everything he needs in his next life. And with these words, he also threw a hundred dollar bill into the grave.

The third man looked at the other two, and thought carefully for several minutes. He did not want them to think he was stingy, but he really did hate spending money.

At last, he bent down, took the two hundred dollar bills out of the grave and put them in his pocket. Then he took out his checkbook and wrote a check for three hundred dollars. He then threw the check into the grave. "I haven't got any change," he said, "but that check is for three hundred dollars, so I've given the same as you."

160. Michael Ma's friends went to the grave yard _____.

161. Two of Michael Ma's friends gave him some money _____.

162. The third friend _____.

163. Which of the following is not true?

165. The third friend took the $200 as the change for his check.

166. The third friend knew that Michael Ma would never cash the check.

When you were a little child, your parents made decisions about everything for you because you weren't old enough to take care of yourself and make careful decisions. Finally, however, you grew up and became a teenager. You begin to have your own thoughts and opinions about life.

As you change and grow into this new person who makes your own decisions, your parents may have a difficult time adjusting (调整). They aren't used to the new you—they only know you as a child.

In most families, this adjustment can cause lots of arguments between teens and parents. You want to cover your walls with posters, but your parents don't understand why you don't like your wallpaper anymore. Then you feel your parents don't respect you and don't allow you to do what you like, and your parents get angry because they disagree with your decisions. And some other things—like the type of friends you have—can cause even bigger arguments, because your parents will always be ready to protect you and keep you safe, no matter how old you are.

However, the good news is that there will be fewer arguments as your parents realize that you have grown up and should have your own ideas. Before you get on very well with each other again, communication between you and parents is very important.

164. Why do your parents need to adjust when you become independent (独立)?

165. From the passage, we can learn that _____.

166. In order to get on well with your parents, you should often _____.
