My class goes to the Ragged School Museum. About 30 years ago, it was a school for poor children. At the museum, we have to be like children from the past. We all have old names, like Albert or Betty. We have to put on different clothes, too.

First, we visit the old classroom. There are little wooden (木制的) desks. The boys sit on one side of the room. The girls sit on the other.

Then we meet our teacher, Miss Perkins, for the day. She looks just like the teachers 130 years ago. Miss Perkins is very strict. First of all, she goes round the class and asks to see our hands. She looks at them to check that they are clean.

Next, Miss Perkins teaches us to write. If any of us says a word, Miss Perkins shouts, “Quiet!” In class, we have to sit up properly. One boy doesn't. Miss Perkins makes him sit at the front with his arms behind a board.

When the lesson is over, we also find out about toys and games in the past. The girls in our class make some little wooden dolls. The boys have a game of football. We make a ball out of a few old rags (破布). It is all right but not as good as a real ball.

In the afternoon, our visit to the Ragged School Museum is over and it is time to leave. We have a great day out! I am glad the Ragged School is not my school. I would not like Miss Perkins for my teacher. My teacher is much kinder.

This year. I work in a German(德国的) middle school as an English teacher. Then I find some parts of the German schools and British（英国的）ones are not the same. Here are the three differences between British and German middle schools

In the UK, most students start school at about 9 a.m. However（然而）, German schools start one hour earlier! That means they have to wake up very early on school days! I think students in Germany may feel tired

British students usually eat their breakfast before coming to school. This doesn't happen in Germany! German kids eat their breakfast after the first lesson of the day, during a special breakfast break. They usually have a yoghurt, some fruit and sandwiches. Yummy!

British students often wear shirts and ties to school. However, German kids can wear their usual jeans and T-shirts. This is the coolest thing about German schools! I hate my school uniform—it is so ugly and uncomfortable

As you can see. there are many differences between British and German schools. However, they are not totally（完全地）different! After all, all students have to take tests, go to maths lessons and do their homework! Some things never change.

Schools Differences	British Schools	German Schools
When to start school	at nine	at 76 _____
77 _____ to have breakfast	at home	at 78 _____
What to wear	79 _____ and ties shirts	jeans and T-shirts
The German schools are 80 _____ from the British ones, but they are the same in some ways.

She has a bookshelf full of books, but they don't say 84m _____ about her. The tennis racket(球拍) under her bed catches her eyes. She has tennis lessons in the summer holiday, and she likes 85s _____.

“I guess that will do,” Valerie says to her mom.

“It is fine, 86b _____ these postcards(明信片) from Aunt Heather may tell the class more about you.” Mom takes out some postcards 87f _____ a box.
