When looking at the fast food stores, like McDonald's, Burger King, and In N Out, you may ask: Why do all of them have the colors red and yellow? The answer is easy -- to make you stop(停下) and buy a hamburger.

Many scientists(科学家) say that red is an appetite-stimulating color. They find that people want to eat more when they see red-colored foods. This may be because red makes people think of happy time.

Yellow, is the color of happiness, too. It is also the first color people can see of all the colors. That's why it is easy to see a McDonald's "M" from a far distance(远距离).

So next time when you see the McDonald's Golden Arches on your way home, you may know why you need food out of the blue.

44. McDonald's uses red and yellow on the logos to _____.
 A. be colorful                      B. interest buyers                      C. look great
45. The underlined word "appetite-stimulating" probably means that red makes people _____.
 A. fun                      B. hungry                      C. healthy
46. According to the passage, people can see a _____ logo more easily from far away.
 A. yellow                      B. red                      C. blue
47. This passage is mainly about _____.
 A. what people's favorite colors are
 B. why people like McDonald's hamburgers
 C. how colors help food stores sell things
