When my family moved to America in 2010 from a small village in Guangdong, China, we brought not only our luggage(行李), but also our village rules, customs and culture. One of the rules is that young people should always respect(尊敬) elders. Unluckily, this rule led to my very first embarrassment(尴尬) in the United States.

I had a part-time job as a waiter in a Chinese restaurant. One time, when I was serving food to a middle-aged couple, the wife asked me how the food could be served so quickly. I told her that I had made sure they got their food quickly because I always respect the elderly. As soon as I said that, her face showed great displeasure. My manager, who happened to hear what I said, took me aside and gave me a long lecture(课) about how sensitive(敏感) Americans are and how they dislike the description "old". I then walked back to the table and apologized(道歉) to the wife. After the couple heard my reason, they understood that the problem was caused by cultural differences(文化差异), so they laughed and were no longer angry.

In my village in China, people are proud of being old. Not so many people live to be seventy or eighty, and people who reach such an age have the most knowledge and experience. Young people always respect older people because they know they can learn from their rich experience.

However, in the United States, people think "growing old" is a problem since "old" shows that a person is going to retire(退休) or that the body is not working well. Here many people try to keep themselves away from growing old by doing exercise or jogging, and women put on makeup, hoping to look young. When I told the couple in the restaurant that I respect the elderly, they got angry because this caused them to feel they had failed to stay young. I had told them something they didn't want to hear.

After that, I changed the way I had been with older people. It is not that I don't respect them anymore; I still respect them, but now I don't show my feelings through words.

In the past, each student would buy a big beautiful notebook and ask their classmates to write in it. But things are a bit different now.

Grade 9 students use USB flash disks(U 盘) instead of notebooks. Some students are not good at Chinese. They can't use sweet words to show how they love their friends. But with the USB flash disk, they can write, draw or even make cartoons for each other.

One of the students said, "I like the USB flash disk because it costs less than fifty yuan. And there is a lot of space for me to write in." But some students still like notebooks better. They say words in computers are cold. It is bad for their eyes to use computers too much. "Although a notebook may have less space, I will still choose it.
