There is a young boy called Bill in my class. He has a hard time saying some words. Sometimes, kids make fun of him. Sometimes, he says the same word twice, or he'll stutter(结巴).

One day, my teacher asked students to make a school play and he let Bill take part in the show. We were all surprised and wanted to know how he could do well with his speaking problem. When the show arrived, Bill started speaking. He still stuttered. Then, to our surprise, when the music started, he started to sing. He had a wonderful voice and didn't stutter. Bill was different when he sang.

The next day at school, everyone was happy for Bill. He said it's easy for people who stutter to sing well. Science doesn't know why, but it's true.

Bill still stutters. But sometimes when he has a hard time giving an answer in class, he just stops and sings the answer. We learned more than a scientific truth that day. Everyone has its strong and weak points. We should pay attention to the strong ones. In this way, we ourselves can grow up better and better. All the people can get along well with each other.

53. Why do kids in Bill's class make fun of him?

- A. Because he can't sing well.
- B. Because he can't say some words well.
- C. Because he doesn't want to talk with others
- D. Because he can't dance at all.

54. The students think Bill's singing is           .

- B. interesting
- C. boring
- D. beautiful

55. What can we infer (推断) from the passage?

- A. Bill sometimes says the same word for many times.
- B. Bill's classmates didn't think he could be in the play at first.
- C. Bill had a wonderful voice when he sang.
- D. Bill couldn't answer questions in class.

56. What is the best title for the passage?

- A. Everyone Is the Same.
- B. Never Make Fun of Others.
- C. Be Kind to Others.
- D. Everyone Has His Strong Points.
