VI. Reading comprehension (阅读理解) (共 24 分)

A. Read the passage and choose the best answer (根据短文内容, 选择最恰当的答案) (共 5 分)

For six hours we have enjoyed the beautiful views in South Africa. Just rocks and sand and the baking sun. Our journey is coming to an end. Daniel and I just want to remember all we have seen and done. He uses a camera. I use words. I have already finished three notebooks.

South Africa is full of stories and views. The roaring of the water at Victoria Falls, the impossible silence of the Okavango Delta (奥卡万戈三角洲). And then the other things: dogs in the streets, whole families living in one room, a kilometre from clean water.

As we drive towards the setting sun, a quietness has fallen over us. The road is empty --- we haven't seen any other car for hours. Suddenly, something catches my eye, something moving next to me. I glance (瞥一眼) in the mirror of the car and that is when I see them. Next to us, by the side of the road, thirty, forty wild horses are racing the car, a cloud of dust (尘土) rising behind them. Brown, strong horses are so near that we are nearly able to touch them, to smell their hot breath. I shout to Dan, "Look!" But he is in a deep sleep, his camera lying useless by his feet. They race the car for a few seconds, then disappear far behind us, just like a picture of heroic forms in the red land. When Daniel wakes up, I tell him what has happened.

"Wild horse?" he says, "Why didn't you wake me up?"

"I tried. But they were gone after a few seconds."

"Are you sure you didn't dream it?"

"You were the one who was sleeping!"

"Well," he says, "The best photos are always the ones we never take."

55. When Daniel wakes up and knows what has happened, he thinks _____.

- A) he always misses the best thing      B) he has already taken beautiful pictures
C) a deep sleep is more important      D) the next trip will be better

56. The article is mainly about _____.

- A) how to enjoy wildlife in Africa      B) meeting the wildlife in Africa
C) tourist attractions in Africa      D) possible dangers of travelling in Africa

B. Read the passage and complete the blanks with proper words (根据短文内容, 选择恰当的单词或词组) (6分)

Let Hospital Robots Help You Out!

Get ready for robots interviewing you when you go to hospital or the doctor. They offer health 57, such as telling you how to stay healthy and even asking you to stop bad health habits.

Hospital robots have worked in some hospitals around the world for a while. By looking at the patients and talking with them, hospital robots can know a patient's feelings. They can also ask a new patient about his health problem, and answer 58 questions like "How do I get some coffee?" or "Where is the exit?" Moreover, they can make good companions (陪伴) for patients, young and old.

Pepper is a hospital robot at a hospital in Australia. He looks a lot like a human. He is very 59 with the patients as well as the doctors. People enjoy being with him. "If you're feeling nervous to speak to a person, you might feel a bit more 60 talking to a robot," Dr.

Robinson, a doctor at the Australian hospital, said. "You won't see Pepper trying to take a man's blood at any time, but you just might see Pepper talking to a man about his blood pressure (血压) report." If you ask Pepper: "Where can I smoke?", Pepper will answer: "We don't allow smoking in the hospital." She will then talk with you about how you can 61 smoking.

The hospital robots cost tens of thousands of dollars, but with the growth of technology, they will become cheaper. However, according to Dr. Robinson, we will 62 see a hospital without doctors in the future. We need doctors, and we also need nurses to care for people.

57. A) calculation      B) checks      C) advice      D) business
 58. A) simple      B) amazing      C) stupid      D) difficult

 62. A) soon      B) always      C) never      D) probably

C. Complete the passage with proper words, and the first letter is given (首字母填空) (共 6 分)

We Finish Together

Before Kim Stemple got too sick to exercise, she used to be a marathon (马拉松) runner. "Running wasn't fun. Being No.1 was never my ambition," she said. "I just tried my best to cross the finish line." She thought the most important thing was to finish a competition instead of 63 it.

In 2009, she got sick. She hoped to leave hospital soon but the doctor told her to stay there for a few more weeks. Kim was very d64 when she heard this. Then a friend gave her a medal (奖章). It came from a runner and in fact the medal helped Kim a lot. She got the p65 to face her health problem bravely. Besides, when other patients saw the medal, they said they wanted medals, too. "A medal is a simple way to offer energy and hope," Kim thought. And soon, We Finish Together--her program was born.

It usually c66 medals from different people, like runners, dancers, swimmers and singers. Most of these medals then go to homeless men and hospital patients. The person who gives a medal usually writes a note. "This is like a tie," says Kim. "If they receive a medal and read w67 words on the note, they will know someone still cares about them."

Can a simple medal really make a difference? "Yes," says Joan Musarra. "When my son opened my package with a new medal and the notes, I was crying. At that moment, I was sitting on a sofa and couldn't move. When I a68 lost confidence in life, the package meant so much to me." We rise by lifting others, and all of us need a rise.

D. Read the passage and answer the questions (根据短文内容回答下列问题) (7分)

I lost my parents at the age of ten. Then I lived alone and began to deliver newspapers to make a living. I got up at 5 am every morning and walked five kilometres to the newspaper office. My working area covered about 3 kilometres. After delivering the newspapers, I would rush home --- another 3 kilometres --- quickly eat and hurry to high school. Sometimes I dreamed of having a bicycle of my own, but I knew it was just a dream.

One winter morning, a boy of my age found me at the door. He said his name was Afzal and his father wanted to see me. I followed Afzal to his home and was welcomed by his parents. As I was leaving, Mr. Kader asked me to wait. "How many kilometres do you walk every day?" he asked. "A little more than six," I answered. My words shocked him. Then I saw Afzal coming towards me, with a new bicycle. It cost quite a lot in India at that time. "This is for you!" he said. It took me a few seconds to understand the love. It felt like home, as if (就像) my parents were there for me. Tears rolled down my face as I held the bicycle.

Mr. Kader said, "Your newspaper editor is a friend of mine. He gave me your address and Afzal told us more about you." I wondered how Afzal knew so much about me. "Everybody, not just in school but the whole of the neighbourhood, does!" he said.

I bowed (鞠躬), thankfully, and left. This time I didn't have to walk. I had the bicycle. I felt that Mr. Kader was the very person who understood my need. The bicycle was far more useful than any other thing at that time.

The bicycle saved my life for many years after that day. It also taught me a lifelong lesson: _____ . Never try to feed a person who is dying of thirst (口渴) .
