- 7. In the pictures, it is now most probably _____.
 A. spring B. summer C. spring or summer D. autumn or winter
48. What are the kids mainly talking about?
 A. The map. B. The tree. C. The directions. D. The seasons.

In space, it's impossible to go outside a spacecraft without wearing a spacesuit. Temperatures in the sunlight can reach 120°C. Without a spacesuit your blood would boil and your body would burst. And you'd be exposed to dangerous radiation (辐射) from the Sun. In the shade, with temperatures falling to -100°C you'd freeze to death. And one other small thing—there's no oxygen (氧气), so you wouldn't be able to breathe.

A spacesuit is made of lots of different layers (层), all protecting the astronaut from the dangers of walking in space. The outer layers connect together so that all of the astronaut's body is covered. On the astronaut's chest (胸部) is the Hard Upper Torso piece, or HUT. All the controls for the spacesuit are on the HUT.

Air and water tubes (管状物) connect the HUT to a backpack that the astronaut wears. The backpack holds oxygen and water and provides electricity for the suit. A fan moves the oxygen through the suit so the astronaut can breathe. And the water flows through a special piece of clothing that is worn under the suit—the Liquid Cooling and Ventilation Garment. It is full of tubes. Water flows through them to keep the astronaut cool during a spacewalk.

The backpack also has a radio in it. This radio is connected to a cap on the astronaut's head under the large helmet. This allows the astronaut to talk with the others in the spacecraft, and with the people on the Earth.

Altogether, a spacesuit has fourteen layers. One garment is rather surprising. Some spacewalks can last for six or eight hours. There are no toilets out there, so a very important part of the spacesuit is a diaper!

49. Which of these dangers of space is not given in the article?

- A. Space waste. B. Low temperatures.
 C. High temperatures. D. Radiation from the Sun.

50. What does the underlined word "It" in Paragraph 3 mean?

- A. The Hard Upper Torso piece. B. The special piece of clothing.
 C. The spacesuit made of different layers. D. The backpack holding oxygen and water.

51. According to the passage, what can we learn about the spacesuit?

- A. Water flowing through tubes keeps astronauts cool in the spacesuit.
 B. The large helmet allows the astronaut to talk with the others in the spacesuit.
 C. The controls for the spacesuit are on the HUT which is on the astronaut's head.
 D. The spacesuit can protect the astronaut from the dangers of walking on the Earth.

Every morning since I got a smartphone, I've used The Weather Channel App to find out what to wear. On the first morning I had to dress without guidance, but thankfully I was able to guess that the day would be cold and foggy by looking out of my window.

I couldn't tell what time it was. I haven't worn a watch for more than a year, because my phone showed the time. So I was late for picking up friends who had been on the bus for two hours. I was also late for my part-time job. And even worse, I couldn't call people to tell them that I was running late.

Getting places was harder, too. I lost my way because I couldn't use the GPS on my phone. My driving, though, got a lot safer because I no longer had my phone in one hand checking directions while driving with the other.

But the number one trouble was not having my contact list. I forgot to write down my friends' and family members' phone numbers before I started the challenge. It was sad to realize that I couldn't remember my brother's and my mom's cell phone numbers. Oh, how I wished to turn on the phone for just a second to look up phone numbers!

Even with all the problems, however, I found peace not worrying about missing a text message or an e-mail.

This challenge was a great learning experience. It surprised me how I'd taken no notice of even the things like remembering phone numbers. We all should take some time to think about how we can depend less on our cell phones.

52. Some difficulties are mentioned in the passage, EXCEPT _____.
 A. knowing the time B. getting places
 C. contacting others D. missing a text message

53. The writer drove more safely than before because he _____.
 A. didn't have to worry about being late.
 B. could drive with the GPS on his phone.
 C. had no cell phone in one hand while driving.
 D. could find the way after making the phone call.

54. What can we learn about the writer from this passage?

- A. This challenge was a difficult but exciting experience for him.
 B. He had such a poor memory that he couldn't remember anything.
 C. He used not to wear a watch for over a year because his watch was broken.
 D. The biggest problem is that he couldn't remember any important phone numbers.

55. What is the main idea of this passage?

- A. The way to use cell phones. B. Depending less on cell phones.
 C. Driving without cell phones. D. The development of cell phones.

"Quickly, Dorothy," she shouted. "Go to the cellar."

Aunt Em ran to the door of the cellar and opened it. Dorothy picked up Toto and ran to the cellar door. Before she could climb down the ladder (梯子) into the cellar, a great wind picked up the house. It turned it round and round and round and then carried it high into the sky.

It was not very dark. Dorothy felt as if she were riding through the sky. She held on to Toto and climbed under her bed, where she stayed for several hours. Then, although the house was still moving, she fell asleep.

When she woke up she did not know how much later—the house was on the ground. It was in a field full of flowers, and there were hundreds of beautifully coloured birds flying about and singing. Not far away, there was a stream with clear, fresh water.

Dorothy was still under her bed. She got up and left the house. She was surprised to see three little men and a little woman walking towards her. They were very strangely dressed. The men's clothes were white and had little stars all over them.

- When they saw Dorothy, they walked up to her and bowed (鞠躬).
 "Welcome to the land of the Munchkins," one of the little men said. "We thank you for killing the Wicked Witch of the East. Now our people are free."
 "I'm afraid you are making a mistake," Dorothy said. "I didn't kill any witch."
 "Your house did," one of the little men said. "Look!"
 He pointed to the house. Dorothy saw two feet sticking out from under it. "Oh!" Dorothy shouted. "The house fell on her. What can I do?"
 "There is nothing to do," the little woman said. "The Wicked Witch of the East is dead, and the Munchkins are thankful to you."
 "Are you a Munchkin?" Dorothy asked.
 "No, but I am their friend," the little woman said. "I am the Witch of the North."
56. Where was the cellar?
 A. In the garden. B. Under the bed.
 C. On the balcony. D. Under the ground.
57. The little people bowed to Dorothy because _____.
 A. they thought she was the Witch of the North.
 B. she had helped them kill the Wicked Witch of the East.
 C. they wanted her to help them kill the Wicked Witch of the East.
 D. they thought she had helped them kill the Wicked Witch of the East.
58. What is the correct order of these events according to the story?
 a. A witch was killed.
 b. Aunt Em opened the cellar.
 c. Dorothy fell asleep under the bed.
 d. Three little men walked towards Dorothy.
 e. A great wind carried the house high into the air.
 A. b-e-c-d-a B. b-e-c-a-d C. e-b-c-a-d D. e-b-a-c-d
59. Which of the following words can best describe Dorothy?
 A. Brave and calm. B. Smart and curious.
 C. Kind but impatient. D. Slow but organized.
60. What can we infer from the story?
 A. The Wicked Witch of the East used to control this land.
 B. The land of the Munchkins must be a great place to live.
 C. Dorothy had to be a Munchkin because she killed their leader.
 D. The little man killed the Wicked Witch of the North by mistake.

六、阅读填空 (共 20 小题; 每小题 1 分, 满分 20 分)

A) 阅读下面短文, 根据所读内容, 在文章后 76—85 小题的空格里填入一个最恰当的单词, 并将答案填写在答题卡标号为 76—85 的相应位置上。

注意: 每个空格只填 1 个单词。

Art is everywhere. Any public space has been carefully designed by an artistic (艺术的) mind to be both functional and beautiful. Why, then, is art still so widely considered to be "the easy subject" at school, or sometimes a waste of time and effort?

Art can connect culture with commercial (商业的) products in a way that not many other things can. Art creates money and holds important emotional (情感的) and cultural values within communities. When people attend a concert, they are paying for music, but they also get an experience or a memory that will go through the rest of their lives. People don't just want material things any more, they want to experience life—the arts are a perfect bridge between culture and economy.

Furthermore, the arts can bring communities together, reducing (减少) loneliness and making people feel safer. Social bonds (纽带) are created among individuals when they share their arts experiences through their expression of common values with their artworks.

The arts clearly have a pretty positive effect on physical and mental health. It is found that people who often go to cultural places or take part in artistic events are more likely to gain good health compared to those who do not. The Royal Society of Public Health discovered that music and art, when used in hospitals, help to improve the conditions of patients by reducing stress and blood pressure.

Children who are connected with the arts make greater achievements in their education. For example, those connected with drama have greater literary (文学的) ability while others taking part in musical practice show greater skills in math and languages. Taking part in the arts is necessary for child development; encouraging children to express themselves through the arts could help form healthy emotional qualities in later life.

Important to human life, art is celebrated and used across the world for different purposes. Life without art would be boring and dead still, for art is a part of what makes us human.

In the 1991 Hong Kong martial arts film Once Upon a Time in China, Chinese folk hero Huang Feihong impressed the world with his lion dance skills.

Thirty years later, an animation (动画制作) film titled I Am What I Am has become a "dark horse." It's about three "left-behind" children, who decide to enter a lion dance competition to attract the _____ of others.

The lead role _____ is A Juan, a thin, plump-looking teen whose parents have been away from home for many years. A girl with the same name helps him and gives him her lion's head mask after performing the dance. Influenced by her dance and support, A Juan _____ to learn lion dancing with his friends A Mao and A Gou.

However, after passing the early contest (比赛) stages, A Juan's father is _____ hurt in a fall from a building construction site. To raise money, the _____ has to leave the countryside for work and takes several part-time jobs.

As the final draws near, a co-worker asks A Juan to go to Shanghai to make more money. When he is about to leave on the day of the contest, he sees his friends fighting with _____ the coach. So he gets the lion's head mask left on the rooftop and jumps _____.

At the end of the competition, he tries to jump up to the highest pole to create a "miracle" because he was told that his father would wake up _____ there was a "miracle." Although he fails to jump that high, he is able to hang the "lion's head" on top of the pole.

He returns to daily life after the contest but the "lion" in his head helps him face any challenge life offers.
