Myth	Truth
Skipping a meal helps you lose weight fast.	There is no truth in this advice. It will not help you lose weight, but may actually make you gain weight. Stop eating a meal can make you digest (消化) food more slowly. This only makes you feel hungrier and by the time you are at the table, you will probably eat more.
If you swallow (吞下) gum, it will stay in your stomach for seven years.	Actually, it takes just a few days for gum (口香糖) to leave your body-not seven years. But because gum cannot be fully digested in your stomach. So if you often swallow gum down, you might find yourself in a terrible situation.
The best way to stop a nosebleed is to put your head back.	That's bad advice. When you put your head back, you might stop the blood from running out of your nose, but it won't stop the bleeding; you will just swallow lots of blood. So the best way is to rest quietly, don't poke (戳) your nose, and the blood will naturally stop within a minute or two.
Cutting your hair will make it grow long.	That's not true. Your hair isn't like trees or plants, where cutting can make new growth. The length of your hair depends on your gene (基因). When it grows to some point, it stops growing. When you cut your hair, it might make your hair look healthier but not necessarily longer.
