You place a stamp on an envelope. And then it travels across the world to find another person. Stamps help people keep in touch with their friends and families. They have played an important role in people's lives for a long time. Now people have a special day for stamps. October 9 is World Post Day. It's a day to celebrate the great work of the postal services. The services make it fast and cheap to send mail.

Before stamps, people didn't pay for the letters they sent, but instead they paid for the letters they got. The first stamp in the world appeared in 1840. It was black, so people called it the Penny Black. It was a British stamp with a picture of Queen Victoria on it.

Years ago, sending letters used to be the most important way to communicate with other people. It seemed that everyone had stamps on hand. Experts think that the Chinese Postal Service has been in use for the longest amount of time in the world.

Now fewer and fewer people send letters, but stamp collecting is still one of the world's most popular hobbies. Through stamp collecting, you can go back in time to hundreds of years ago or go into outer space. You can meet famous people, or learn about places and animals from all over the world. There are even stamp clubs to help people find new stamps to add to their collections. Alex, a stamp collector said, "Collecting stamps does not cost a lot of money and most of all, it's fun."

- B. China has the longest history of using stamps.

Have you ever lost sleep worrying about tests and schoolwork? Eating on the run because you are just too busy? You're not alone. Everyone feels stressed (焦虑的) at times—adults, teens and even kids.

Stress is a response to pressure or threat. Under stress we may feel nervous. Stress set off a strong hormone (荷尔蒙) called adrenaline(肾上腺) that influences the nervous system. As a result, when you're nervous or stressed you might feel your heartbeat gets faster.

For students, everyday pressures can start the stress response. For example, they might feel stressed before giving a talk in front of the class.

Even in these situations, the stress response can help you do well under pressure. It can help you rise to a challenge and meet it with focus and strength. Facing challenges—instead of backing away from them—is a part of learning and growing.

When the challenge is over, the stress response becomes less strong. You can relax and be ready for a new challenge.
