Young heroes

A hero and a friend

Haden Stusak is from Atlanta in the USA. One day, he was playing in his grandma's swimming pool with his best friend, Josiah Buddah. Haden was practising diving (潜水) when he saw Josiah at the bottom of the pool. He was drowning (溺水). The adults did not see him. "I was the only person who saw him," said Haden. Haden, who was six years old, quickly dived into the pool. He pulled five-year-old Josiah out of the water. A few minutes later Josiah was breathing (呼吸) again.

Everyone called Haden a hero. "I'm not a hero," said Haden. "I'm just a good friend."

Earthquake hero

Nine-year-old Lin Hao from China was having a math lesson with thirty of his classmates when there was a huge earthquake. The school building started to fall down. Lin ran out quickly, but his classmates were still in the building. Lin went back into the building three times to help them get out. "It was my job to look after my classmates," he said.

Good neighbours

Kiah Kurtzer, who was from Australia, was looking out of her bedroom window one night when she saw that her neighbour's bin (垃圾箱) was on fire. Fourteen-year-old Kiah first called the fire station, then she ran outside to start to put the fire out. Her neighbours came to help her. When the firefighters arrived, the fire was already out.

"I was scared," said Kiah, "but I thought it was important to help my neighbour."

"Mikey, I have some letters for you to mail," Mum called.

"OK!" Mikey put down his book and went out with the letters. When he passed Evan's house, he saw him playing basketball. Mikey put the letters down and started playing with him.

Suddenly three letters flew by, caught by the wind.

Mikey and Evan ran to catch the letters. Then Mikey ran to mail them.

The next day, Mum went into Mikey's room when he was cleaning it. "Would you give this yellow envelope (信封) to Mrs Smith?" she asked. "It's the money from the yard sale (庭院拍卖会)."

Mikey agreed and went out.

On his way to Mrs Smith's home, he saw Emily with a cute dog.

"Do you want to walk him?" Emily asked.

"Sure!" Mikey said. Then he saw the mailbox. "Oh, wait. I have to mail this."

Mikey ran to the mailbox. Just as he heard the envelope drop down inside, he realised he had made a mistake.

Mikey tried to see into the mailbox, but it was dark.

"What happened?" Emily asked.

Mikey told her his mistake. Then the two kids tried to reach into the mailbox as far as their arms would go.

"Stop!" A policeman came, shouting. He asked, "What's going on, kids?"

"I mailed the money..." Mikey said and started to cry.

The policeman walked Mikey home. After Mikey told his mum what had happened, she called the Post Office. A mailman agreed to bring the yellow envelope to Mikey's mum soon.

"Next time," Mikey promised, "I'll finish my job before I stop to play!"

Mum smiled.

51. Mikey was _____ when his mum asked him to mail some letters.

C

When Robert Goddard was 17 years old, he climbed high up a tree. He looked around and imagined going into space, maybe even to Mars. The year was 1899.

As a child, Goddard loved to read. He often visited the library to borrow books on physical sciences. He was a sick child and didn't finish high school until he was 21. He later became a physics teacher at a university. In his free time, he built rockets (火箭) and took them to a field, but they didn't fly.

In 1920, Goddard wrote an article about rocket travel. When the New York Times saw it, a reporter wrote that Goddard had less knowledge about science than a high school student.

In 1926, Goddard built a ten-foot rocket, put it into a car, and drove to a field on his aunt's neighbouring farm. He lit the fuse (点火), and the rocket went into the sky. It travelled at 60 miles per hour. Then it fell into the field. The flight lasted 2.5 seconds. The US government didn't show much interest in Goddard's invention. To continue his study, Goddard used his own money and the money from private groups.

Over the years, his rockets grew to 18 feet and flew up to 9,000 feet. No one made fun of him after he was successful. In fact, he became known as the father of modern rocketry. He wrote, "The dream of yesterday is the hope of today, and the reality (现实) of tomorrow."

Goddard didn't live to see space flight. He died in 1945, but his work didn't stop. Scientists continued to build bigger and better rockets. In 1969, the American rocket Apollo II took the first men to the moon. At that time, the New York Times wrote about its 1920 article: "The Times regrets the error (错误)."

56. When Goddard was young, he _____.
 A. was in good health B. loved climbing trees
 C. dreamed of being a teacher D. was interested in physical sciences
57. What does the underlined word "it" in Paragraph 3 refer to?
 A. Goddard's article. B. Goddard's rocket.
 C. Goddard's school. D. Goddard's book.

58. What do we know about Goddard's first rocket?
 A. It was an 18-foot rocket. B. It travelled at 25 miles an hour.
 C. It got a lot of people's attention. D. It was tested on his aunt's neighbouring farm.
59. What can we know about Goddard in the passage?
 A. Goddard helped make Apollo II.
 B. Goddard graduated from university at 21.
 C. The government began to support Goddard in the 1930s.
 D. The New York Times felt sorry for its 1920 article about Goddard.
60. What can we learn from Goddard's story?
 A. Be happy with what we have.
 B. Think hard before doing something.
 C. Always have a dream and work hard.
 D. Working with a team is better than working alone.

Would you like to meet people whose interests are the same as yours? Maybe you like to sing and would like to meet with other singers. Or maybe you are interested in the theatre and want to find people with whom you can attend a play. A website called Meetup lets you do that. Unlike most social networking (网络社交) groups, whose members communicate with each other online, Meetup members actually meet each other in person. Most Meetup members want to get together just for fun: to play chess, discuss books, ride their bikes, practise French, etc. Some Meetups are support groups: people get together with others who have the same problem. For example, there are Meetups of people who have lost their children. Other Meetup groups are for the purpose of career (职业) networking. As of 2019, there were more than 30 million Meetup members in over 200 countries.

Meetup was the idea of Scott Heiferman, whose idea for creating these communities came as a result of the 11th September 2001 attacks on the United States. Heiferman said that the way in which the people of New York City came together in the aftermath (后果) of that sad thing inspired (启发) him. He wanted to make it easy for people to connect with strangers in their own community. He created Meetup nine months after the attacks.

Meetup connects people online in order to meet offline (线下). Anyone can start a Meetup. Meetup believes that “people can change their personal world, or the whole world, by organising (组织) themselves into groups that are powerful enough to make a difference”.

71. Unlike most social networking groups, Meetup members meet each other _____.
72. Some Meetups are support groups: people get together with others who _____.
73. As of 2019, the number of Meetup members reached over _____.
74. Heiferman wanted to make it easy for people to _____.
75. Meetup connects people online so that _____.
