B

When I spent the summer with my grandmother, she asked me to go shopping in the general store with a list. There was a lady like no one I've ever seen. "Excuse me, I need to get these," I said, holding up my list. She looked up and said, "I'm Miss Bee. I think you need to get them by yourself." Miss Bee pointed to a sign. "There's no one here except you and me and I'm not your servant, so get yourself a basket and get all you want by yourself."

I visited Miss Bee every Tuesday and Thursday that summer. Sometimes she shortchanged (少找零钱) me. Other times she overcharged (多收钱). Going to the store was like going into battle (战斗). All summer long she found ways to trick me. But by summer's end the shopping trip that had once taken me an hour was done in 15 minutes. The morning I was to return home, I sopped in to get some run. "All right, little girl," she said. "What did you learn this summer?" "That you're a meanie (坏人)!" I replied. Miss Bee just laughed and said, "I know what you think of me. Well, I don't care! My job is to teach every child I meet life lessons. When you get older you'll be glad!" "Glad I met Miss Bee? Ha! The idea was absurd (荒谬的)..."

Until one day my daughter came to me with homework troubles. "It's too hard," she said. "Could you finish my math problems for me?" "If I do it for you, how will you ever learn to do it yourself?" I said. Suddenly, I was back at that general store where I had learned the hard way to add up my bill by myself. Had I ever been overcharged since then?

C

It's a funny thing, being in another country. It makes you realize the importance of all the things you love about your home, whether it be the food, the traditions, or the people. For me personally, reading and sharing books helps me to remember my friends, my family and my home country, the UK.

Here are just four of the books that can make home appear clearly in my mind:

Daddy Long Legs by Jean Webster. This book takes the form of letters, and follows the story of a young girl, Judy, whose parents are dead, as she goes to university and discovers a whole world of new experiences. This book always reminds(使想起)me of my home and my mother, because she used to read it to me when I was ill in bed.

Harry Potter by J. K. Rowling. I'm sure many of you have heard of this one! These books are about a boy who discovers he's a wizard (男巫), and has all kinds of adventures at a wizarding school. I love to read these again and again, because I can really get lost in the stories and the whole magical world the author (作者) has created. Recently, I have also been reading them in German.

The Secret Garden by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Have you ever read a description of countryside that made you feel like you were there? For me, this book does exactly that. It is about a young girl who is taken to live in a big house in Yorkshire, England, and discovers a secret garden.

The Railway Children by E. Nesbit. This was one of my favorite books when I was younger, and for this reason it still strongly reminds me of England and my childhood. It is also set in Yorkshire, and follows three children and their experiences living next to a railway.

Is Fresh Air Really Good for You? We all grew up hearing people tell us to "go out and get some fresh air." 36 According to recent studies, the answer is a big YES, if the air quality in your camping area is good.

37 If the air you're breathing is "clean" — which it would be if you're away from the smog of cities — then the air is filled with life-giving, energizing oxygen (活性氧). If you exercise out of doors, your body will learn to breathe more deeply, allowing even more oxygen to get to your muscles (肌肉) and your brain.

Recently, people have begun studying the connection between the natural world and healing (治愈). 38 In these places patients can go to be near nature during their recovery. It turns out that just looking at green, growing things can reduce stress, lower blood pressure, and put people into a better mood (情绪). Greenery is good for us. Hospital patients who see tree branches out their window are likely to recover at a faster rate than patients who see buildings or sky instead. 39 It gives us a great feeling of peace.

40 While the sun's rays can age and harm our skin, they also give us beneficial (有益的) Vitamin D. To make sure you get enough Vitamin D — but still protect your skin — put on sunscreen right as you head outside. It takes sunscreen about fifteen minutes to start working, and that's plenty of time for your skin to absorb a day's worth of Vitamin D.

根据材料内容, 从下面五个选项中选出能填入文中空缺处的最佳选项, 使短文意思通顺、内容完整。

A. Fresh air cleans our lungs.

B. All across the country, recovery centers have begun building Healing Gardens.

C. Being in nature refreshes us.

D. Another side benefit of getting fresh air is sunlight.

E. But is fresh air really as good for you as your mother always said?
