When the bus stopped at his street, Grayson jumped out and raced home 27 anyone could stop him. He burst* through the door of his apartment, dropped his backpack on the floor, and rushed to his room 28.

"Grayson?" Grandpa's voice called out. "Was that you?"

Grayson didn't want to hurt Grandpa's feelings so he had better 29. "Yes, Grandpa, it's me."

"What happened?"

Grayson then explained about the homework. Each student needed to build something together with an adult and write a 30 to explain how it had been done.

Grandpa listened quietly. "That sounds nice. 31 does it make you so discouraged?"

"I don't have 32 to help me. Mom worked all the time. Dad never wanted to do anything with me." He sounded so pitiful.

Grandpa raised his eyebrows in surprise. "What am I? A 33 person?"

"You'd build something with me, Grandpa?"

"Sure, I would."

Grayson's heart seemed so 34 that he thought it would float away*. He raced to his backpack and took his task paper. They sat at the table and made a list of ideas. Finally, they settled on building a cardboard 35.

When they finished, the kitchen table was a mess. But Grayson couldn't stop 36.

"What do you think?" Grandpa asked.

Grayson looked at their work and said, "It's the 37 robot I've ever built. Now I have to write my report."

He 38 the robot and turned toward his room, but he stopped. He ran to Grandpa's side and hugged 39. "Thank you for helping me, Grandpa. I had a lot of fun. I can hardly 40 to build something else with you."

Grandpa squeezed his shoulders. "Me, too. Now, go write your report. Maybe next time we can build a volcano."

Grayson smiled again.

Visiting Budapest, the capital of Hungary? We are now offering you once-in-a-lifetime cruises!

Day time and evening cruises with guiding

- 1 drink served on the ship
- 30 languages to choose from for the explanations from the headset

During the daytime sightseeing cruise, you will hear amazing stories about the charming sights along the river. After arriving at the Margaret Island, you may choose to get off the ship to explore it and then take the next boat back to the center. Or you can just stay on the ship if you don't wish to visit the island. After a 5 minutes' stop, the ship continues its way towards the center.

The evening sightseeing cruise is a sound and vision feast*. The boat starts from the centre of Budapest and makes a round trip. While you are appreciating the luminous sights, famous people from the Hungarian history, kings, queens, poets and inventors tell you legendary stories about Budapest. The program ends with the Blue Danube Waltz which will whisper in your ears any time you remember the tour.

Nowadays the intelligent parcel lockers like Hive Box started to play an important role in most of the deliveries in our life.

Before the introduction of intelligent parcel lockers, although a large part of the delivery process started to use machines and technologies, last-mile delivery mainly depends on couriers*. With the increase in the number of express orders, there are more problems such as shortage of couriers and too much work pressure. At the same time, because of different locations and the uncertainty of the picking time as well as other factors, the efficiency of couriers was very low. What's worse, second deliveries often occurred. Under such situation, intelligent parcel lockers were put into use. They greatly improve users' experience and delivery efficiency.

However, some serious problems actually impede the development of it. That's why it doesn't develop as fast as we expect. Installation cost of the lockers at the early stage is expensive. Although the free storage with no time limit once attracted a large member of users, such kind of method is not practical in the long run and has caused losses these years.

Take Hive Box, the leading company as well as China's largest self-service parcel locker operator in this industry, as an example. In 2019, the intelligent parcel lockers of the Hive Box led a wide-spread debate. Because the locker put up a notice that tried to let the users pay 1 RMB to get their parcels without informing in advance. On April 30, 2020, Hive Box began a membership system. It also caused dissatisfaction.

It seems that the intelligent parcel lockers industry has been exploring its way to get more profits and reduce losses, but so far, there has been no perfect solution. So reformation and more studies should be done to guide it to the correct path to a better development.

44. What's the main idea of Paragraph 2?

- A. How the intelligent parcel lockers worked.
- B. How the intelligent parcel lockers came out.
- C. What problems intelligent parcel lockers met.
- D. What advantages the intelligent parcel lockers had.

45. What does the underlined word impede probably mean?

- A. Stop.
- B. Improve.
- C. Slow.
- D. Help.

46. Why does the writer mention Hive box?

- A. To attract people to use Hive box more often.
- B. To show Hive box is the biggest company in the industry.
- C. To prove how difficultly the intelligent parcel lockers develop.
- D. To explain why people don't like Hive box's membership system.

47. According to the passage, the future of the intelligent parcel lockers is _____.

- A. different
- B. hopeful
- C. promising
- D. worrying

Wildfires, heatwaves and floods... recent climate disasters in many parts of the world once again stress one issue - the effects of climate change. Carbon emissions* is the main enemy of it. Thus, the whole world is making an effort to achieve a carbon-neutral world.

Being carbon neutral means taking away the same amount of carbon dioxide (CO₂) from the air as you put into it. It is part of a goal worked out by UN Climate Change in 2015. China, the world's largest producer of carbon dioxide, has promised to achieve carbon neutral before 2060.

There are two main ways to achieve carbon neutral. One is to balance the carbon dioxide given off with the amount that is taken in by forests. Turning farmland into forests, planting trees in cities and towns, modernizing agriculture*, restoring wetlands and building nature parks all help. The other is to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by using non-fossil fuels. China, the biggest automobile market worldwide, is taking a technologically open-minded approach to explore innovative technologies for green mobility such as electric and fuel-cell vehicles. Tesla and other homemade electric cars have a rapid development in China in recent years.

There will be a carbon dioxide emissions peak* before achieving carbon neutral. Then the emission goes down without reaching to the peak again theoretically*. Most countries in the European Union saw their carbon emissions peak in around 1980. For the United States and Japan, the peak occurred in around 2005. They hope to realize carbon neutrality by 2050. Actually, the emission didn't have a straight-line decline* and rebounded in the USA later. These nations have had 45 to 70 years to realize an unhurried transition to low carbon, while China is expected to reach carbon dioxide emissions peak before 2030. Its strong will set a good example.

Carbon neutral requires attention not only from governments, organizations or companies. Frankly speaking, everyone should be responsible for carbon neutrality. Individuals can do a lot to lower carbon emissions and push for stronger public awareness of climate issues, such as planting our own vegetables, using cold water when washing clothes and so on.

48. _____ influences the climate change.

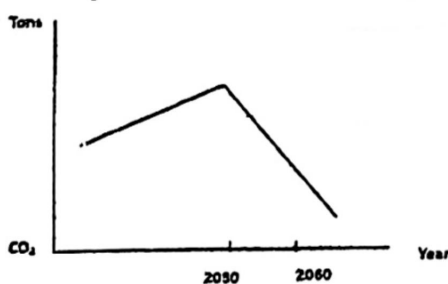

- A. The wildfire B. The heatwave C. The flood D. The carbon emission

49. According to the passage, _____ can help achieve carbon- neutrality.

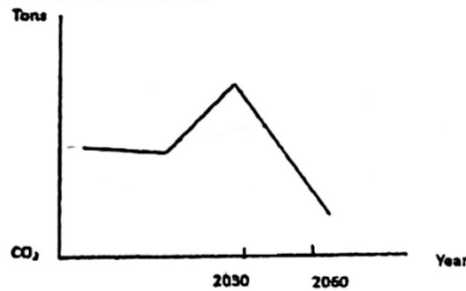

- ① using both sides of paper ② protecting the wetlands
③ farming in the traditional way ④ driving electric cars like Tesla instead

- A. ①②③ B. ①②④ C. ①③④ D. ②③④

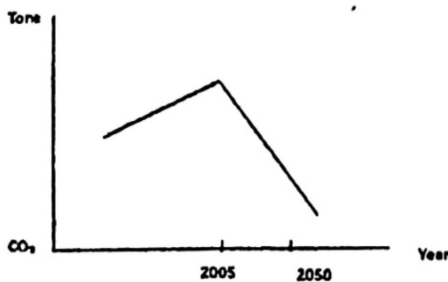

50. Which picture shows the carbon dioxide emissions of the USA?

B.

C.

D

51. What's the best title of the passage?

- A. Results of Heavy Climate Emissions
B. Plans for the Future Carbon-neutrality
C. Benefits of Achieving Carbon Neutrality
D. Changes of Carbon Emissions all over the World

At Denver there were a number of passengers into the coaches. In one coach there sat a very pretty young woman dressed in elegant taste. Among the newcomers were two men, one was handsome with a brave, frank face and good manner. The other was a black-faced person, heavily built and roughly dressed. The two were handcuffed* together.

As they passed down the walkway of the coach, the only available seat offered was the one facing the beautiful young woman.

"Well, Mr. Easton. Don't you ever recognize your old friend?" She opened her eyes widely.

It surprised the younger man. He threw off the embarrassment instantly, and greeted her with his left hand.

"It's Miss Fairchild," he said, with a smile. "I'll ask you to forgive the other hand."

He slightly raised his right hand, handcuffed to the left one of black-faced man. The woman's glad look slowly changed to a kind of fear. The black-faced man had been watching her for a moment. He suddenly spoke when Easton was about to continue.

"Excuse me, miss, but, I see you're familiar with the officer here. He's taking me to Leavenworth prison*. If you can ask him to speak a word for me and it'll make things easier for me there."

"Oh!" said the woman, her look turned bright again. "So that is what you are doing out here? An officer!"

"You are one of these attractive Western heroes now. Will I see you again soon?" asked the woman, warmly.

"Not soon, I think," said Easton. "My butterfly days are over."

"Say, Mr. Easton," shouted the black-faced man. "This isn't quite fair. I haven't had a smoke all day. Haven't you talked long enough? Take me to smoker's room now. I'm half dead."

"Miss Fairchild. Duty calls, you know." Easton held out his hand for a farewell.

"It's too bad," she looked outside the window.

The two passengers nearby had heard most of the conversation. Said one of them: "That officer is a really good man!"

"Pretty young to be an officer, isn't he?" asked the other.

"Young?!" the first speaker, "Oh! Come on! Did you ever know an officer to handcuff a prisoner to his right hand?"
