Still, she worked to make it happen. She planted some common marigold seeds and took good care of them. A year later, when the marigolds bloomed (盛开), she took the seeds and planted them. Then she waited another year for them to bloom.

Day after day, year after year, through many seasons, her life changed. After her husband died, her children moved away, and many other things happened, but her love to grow white marigolds remained strong in her heart.

Hi Jo,

Tom here. I now have all the information of the party on Sunday. Please write them down. You don't want to miss it.

Well, Sue wanted it at her house but her garden's too small so we are going to hold it in the park. We can learn to dance or fly kites. We're also going to play football before tea. You must like it. Tea – yes, that's important. Sam will offer a pizza and we're all going to bring sandwiches. Don't forget yours! I think we're going to be thirsty after the football, so bring something to drink.

Umm – anything else? Oh yes, of course, the time. We all need to be home by eight, so we decided to start at two. It's going to be fun! See you then. Bye.
