Many kids are using technology to spend their free time. Read about two kids here.

Frank Smith, age 11, New York

I used my savings to buy a 3D printer. It was so exciting! I began designing (设计) things even before it came. I started with simple designs. One was a pencil box for my sister. Then I created more difficult ones.

I have a love for 3D printing. It allowed me to help my community. I worked with Good Karma Engineering. We created reusable masks (口罩) with 3D-printed designs.

Kelly Rogers, age 12, Hawaii

My aunt suggested science livestreams (直播). I could learn from scientists all over the world. My new friends teach me the importance of environment.

The more I learn, the more I want to help make the world a better place. I've started by trying to live a green life. I cut down on my single-use plastics. I ride a bike to school.

What new hobbies have you tried lately? Share your story with us at tfkeditors@time.com.

John grew up thin and weak. When he went to the college, John decided to make a change.

He took advantage of the free gym at his college, and went there to exercise every day from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. He lifted light weights at first and then moved on to heavier ones. Every three weeks, he increased the weight he lifted by five pounds.

He also did push-ups, sit-ups, and pull-ups. To build a strong body, he drank milk before he worked out. It helped him a lot. John even changed his eating habits. He started eating foods like beef, eggs, brown rice, and carrots.

In six months, his hard work paid off. John was no longer thin and weak. He was strong and no one bullied (欺负) him in college. He felt a lot happier and more confident (自信的) about himself.

John was so encouraged by his change that he decided to create a program teaching high schoolers how to get stronger. He first taught at his old high school, and then taught at several high schools nearby. Later he made a DVD about how to get stronger. In the end, John went on to talk shows and wrote books about his journey.

54. How long does it take John to build a strong body?

- A. Three weeks.                      B. Six months.
C. 9—10 months.                      D. A whole year.

If you have to describe yourself to someone else, what would you say? It can be difficult to be self-aware (自我认知的). But knowing who you are can help you so much.

Self-awareness is an ability to see yourself clearly. You may know that you love playing an instrument because you're good at it, and music makes you happy. Or you know you prefer watching TV on your own because it helps you relax. And it also means understanding how your thoughts, feelings and behaviour (行为) can influence other people.

Knowing what you like, dislike and more about yourself allows you to be wise about friendships, schoolwork and social life. It helps build confidence (信心). Being self-aware doesn't mean only thinking of yourself. By understanding your own feelings, you have more understanding of other people too.

A good way to learn about anything is to ask questions. Ask yourself questions that start with "What" instead of "Why". So if you don't understand why you keep arguing (争论) with a friend, ask yourself what you disagree on instead of why you're arguing. If you're wondering whether you like a book, ask yourself what were the last three books you loved and what you liked about them. To recognize your own likes and dislikes is a good way to learn more about yourself.

Learning to be more self-aware is a skill, and this means you learn it as you grow. So don't be afraid of taking risks. And encourage yourself to try out new things, like playing a new sport or listening to different music. Learn more about yourself and bring out the best in you.

61. What is the main idea of Paragraph 2?

- A. The way to be self-aware.
- B. The meaning of self-awareness.
- C. The influence of self-awareness.
- D. The importance of being self-aware.

62. Which question should you ask yourself if you argue with friends?

- A. Why does he or she argue with me?
- B. How can I get on well with him or her?
- C. What makes us disagree with each other?
- D. When did I argue with him or her last time?

63. What does the underlined word "recognize" mean?

- A. Change.
- B. Discuss.
- C. Express.
- D. Discover.

64. Which of the following would the writer agree?

- A. Self-awareness is a born-with ability.
- B. Try out new things without thinking risks.
- C. Think of yourself before thinking of others.
- D. Self-awareness helps you understand others.

65. Which of the following can be the best title for the passage?

- A. Following Your Heart
- B. Getting to Know Yourself
- C. Getting Ready for the Future
- D. Being Brave to Try New Things

Ⅷ. 任务型阅读 (共5小题; 每小题2分, 满分10分)

阅读下面短文, 按要求完成66~70题。

If you need some luck in your life, one of the most known is the four-leaf clover(苜蓿). Here's what you should know about this little green plant.

The clover is Ireland's national symbol, and most have three leaves, standing for faith(信仰), hope, and love. Because it is hard to find one with a fourth leaf, it stands for luck.

The clover plant spread from Ireland across the world, and so did the idea of a four-leaf clover as a symbol of luck. In Korea, people use them to make a lucky meal. And in Italy, car company Alfa Romeo used to paint a four-leaf clover on the side of its race cars. One of its drivers started the practice for a race in 1923, and he ended up winning the race!

Some say there's a 1 in 10,000 chance of finding a four leaf clover in the wild, but you can increase your chances. If you can find one, you'll probably find another. Since four-leaf clovers tend to (倾向于) be found close together.

While four-leaf clovers probably don't have special power, a little extra(额外的) luck is always nice to have. Try looking for one and see what happens. It just might be your lucky day!
