Our teacher gave us a task called "secret friends" for the coming week. With our eyes closed, we drew(抽取) a name of a classmate from a basket. We were supposed to do nice things for our friends without letting them know who was doing it. We could leave encouraging notes or cards on their desks or in their schoolbags.

Soon, the task was turned into a competition of giving gifts instead of notes. Everyone was getting cool presents except me. I received nothing but cards with nice words about me. On the last morning, I finally got a package. When I opened it, the girls around all laughed. It was perfumed powder (香粉), an "old lady" gift. My face went red.

I tried to forget about the embarrassing gift, but when the girls mentioned it again in the washroom, I joined in.

"I'm your secret friend." It was Rachel. "I'm sorry about the gift," she said to me in a low voice.

From a poor family she was often laughed at by those with rich parents. Yet she just bore(忍受) everything silently.

I was sick to my stomach as my hurtful words ran through my mind. She had heard everything. How could I have been so cruel?

Later I learned that she had felt bad all week about not being able to leave me any cool present and her mum had given up her only luxury (奢侈品).

I told her that I had only said those things to try to fit in (融入).

"We aren't that different from each other, are we?" she smiled understandingly.

Her simple words, spoken from her heart.

Part of Earth's beauty comes from its oceans. Ocean scientists study the chemical make-up of the ocean, weather patterns, the geography of the ocean floor, and many other areas. Their work is exciting although sometimes dangerous. Using technology to do certain tasks helps. For example, robotic arms are used for very dangerous tasks.

One basic part of ocean study is understanding waves and how they work. Wind is the great maker of waves. The waves we know are mostly produced by winds blowing over the sea. They are directly connected with the wind speed and the time that wind lasts.

Sometimes ocean life can be seen in the wave. Living things seem to be staying within the wave, moving slowly inside it as if they were weightless. Besides the beauty of waves, scientists are interested in their technical ways. The diagram of waves shows how scientists examine waves. Waves are measured from the top (crest) to the bottom (trough). This allows scientists to find out the height of a wave. They also measure waves from crest to crest to determine (测定) the length of a wave.

During serious storms, huge waves might cut a sea ship apart. Ships are at great risk of winding up as broken pieces after being hit by the force of a huge wave. By understanding the ocean, scientists can prevent this break-up of ships by predicting when the water will be too dangerous for people and their ships. The study of waves and the ocean also allows scientists to make sure how certain beaches were formed. By studying the oceans, a great deal can be learned about the surface we live on.

Trust has been considered as the basis of any relationship, including friendships. No relationship can last long without trust. 36 Sometimes, it takes years, even a whole life to make it. We certainly know who are the people we trust. However, how do we know if others trust us? 37 You may first like to talk to the friends you trust most. It is the same with your friends.

Whom do you ask for advice when you need it most? Either your parents or your friends may first come into your mind. You only ask people you really trust for advice. You know they will never pass on a wrong suggestion. And so do they. 38

Different ideas and discussions are a part of every relationship, and this is also true for friendships. Actually, two people can't always have the same opinions on a situation and they may share different suggestions. Sometimes some people find it hard to forgive and forget. 39 It is because they trust you and believe that you will never cause any pain for them on purpose.

There are times in life when you find yourself a lonely soldier. 40 Your friends will never let you down and will strongly stand for you when you need encouragement. If they side with you when you need them the most, you can know that they trust you.

Last October, I told my pupils in Pompton School about my plan. "I'd like you to do jobs to make some 41," I said, "Then we'll buy food for someone in need."

I wanted them to experience that it's 42 to give than to receive. I hoped they could experience a sense of their own ability to make a change.

Early in Thanksgiving week, the children couldn't wait to 43. Before paying for the turkey and other food we chose in the supermarket, Kristine cried. "Flowers!" And the group all ran toward the holiday 44.

"You can't eat flowers!" I said 45. After all, it was helpful to buy more food.

"But Mrs. Sherlock," came the loud 46, "we want flowers."

In the middle of the plants, there was a pot of unusual purple mums(菊花). "47 will like this one," the children agreed.

48 the address of a poor grandmother who had lived alone for years, we set off. An hour later, we stopped in front of a small house. A thin woman with a 49 face came to meet us.

As the kids carried all the food in, the old woman oohed and aahed -- much to her visitors' pleasure. When Amy put the mums on the table, the woman seemed 50. "She's wishing it was a bag of food," I thought.

"51 is your close friend in the woods?" Michael asked.

The woman brightened. "The birds. They often fly over for food 52. I share my bread with them," she said.

Then we returned to the car. Through the window we saw her walk past the turkey, straight to the 53. She put her face in them and looked up with a big smile. She was 54 before our eyes!

In that one short moment, the children had seen for themselves the 55 they owned to make a change. Sometimes a person needed a pot of nice purple flowers on a dark November day.
