Beijing Winter Olympics Pins

Beijing 2022 Winter Olympics souvenirs(纪念品) have drawn much attention from collectors around the world, especially the beautiful pins. They have won high praise for the wonderful patterns.

The Beijing Winter Olympics pins connect traditional Chinese culture with modern beauty. It's thought that the style of the countdown souvenir pin collection is really special and romantic.

As for the 200-day countdown pin, the pattern features sakura(樱花) on the front and a snowflake on the back, showing how the Beijing 2022 Winter Olympics follows the Tokyo 2020 Summer Olympics.

If collectors get all pins in the countdown series, they can piece them together in the shape of a big “0”, which means the countdown is over and that the Winter Olympics is going to kick off.

Some limited(限量的) pins, such as a series of six inspired by ancient Chinese stories, quickly sold out. The series has put Chinese fairy tales into the pattern, vividly showing the images of Pangu separating the sky from the earth, Jingwei filling up the sea, Chang'e flying to the moon, etc. Only 2,022 sets of the series were produced.

Other pin patterns include traditional games, for example, the ancient Chinese bull game, Jiaju. Ice play, an old sport in North China, is also shown on a single pin. The ancient style of the pattern can be found in ancient paintings of the Ming and Qing dynasties.

As the host of the 2022 Winter Olympic Games, Beijing has told its own stories to the world through these colorful pins, created to welcome athletes and audience around the world. (From: <https://language.chinadaily.com.cn/>)

Primary and junior high school students now are allowed to stay at school for two hours after school is over. Students can enjoy their hobbies or take part in other after-school activities.

This is one of the key measures(措施) of the “double reduction” policy(“双减”政策) across the country. The policy tries to reduce students’ stress caused by too much homework and after-school training.

When students leave school, they can see their parents, rather than their grandparents, waiting outside to pick them up. Students are happy about it, and parents, too.

Mrs. Wang, a mother of a second-grader, said, “I’ve bought extra exercise books for my son since he has no homework now. I still need to know how well he has learned.”

The changes mean that students can choose to do their homework at school after class. “We have a reading course after the last class ends at 4 pm,” said Zhang Zirui, a primary school student.

“Then we do our homework at school. I don’t have to do homework when I go back home.”

Lan Lan, a student at a junior high school, has less homework now. "The teacher has cut out the repetitive content(重复内容) in the homework, which I welcome a lot," she said.

Mr. Wang, the father of a junior high school student, said the measures showed the government's great efforts to reduce the burden (负担) on schools, parents and students.

76. What makes students feel stressed?

77. How do parents feel about picking their children up after school?

78. Why has Mrs. Wang bought extra exercise books for her son?
