Most schools have a rule that students must wear uniforms to class. The magazine TIME for Kids asked readers to discuss whether or not students should wear uniforms at school. Here, two of them share their ideas.

Yuna, 9, California:

Teachers don't have to worry about losing sight of students on the playground or on a field trip. Also, when kids wear uniforms, both the older and younger students feel like they are part of the same group. I wear a uniform and feel like my school is one big team. I think it is harder to bully someone about his or her clothes if you are all wearing the same thing. When everyone wears the same, you don't have to worry about how you look or about wearing the latest trend. Parents can save money, as well. And in the morning, I can save time because I don't have to choose what kind of clothes I should wear.

Emerson, 12, Michigan:

I don't think kids should have to wear a uniform. If students are wearing the same thing, they can't express themselves. Kids should feel like they can be their own person. During school hours, we should also be comfortable. If students could wear normal clothes, we'd be able to express ourselves, be comfortable, and not spend money on clothes that we never wear at home.

I've found that waking early was one of the best things I did last year, and I would like to share my experiences. You might like to know how I can get up at 4:30 a.m.

For many years, I was a late riser. Then things changed, because I had to wake up before 6:30 a.m. to prepare my kids' lunches and get them ready for school. When I wanted to train for my first marathon, I decided that I needed to start running in the morning if I wanted to have any time left for my family.

So, I decided to make waking up early a habit. I started by getting up at 5:30 a.m., then at 5 a.m. When that became a habit, and I had to wake up at 4 a.m. or 3:30 a.m. for an early long run, it wasn't a problem. And last November, I wanted to write a novel. So I decided to get up at 4 a.m. to write for at least an hour a day. Now that I have achieved that novel-writing goal, I don't need to wake that early anymore. But I have got used to waking at 4:30 a.m. happily. Some days, when I'm really tired, I'll wake at 5 a.m., but that's still earlier than I used to wake up.
