Battling E-waste

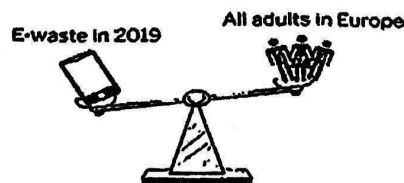

TEENS(No. 686)

【E-waste is the world's fastest-growing type of waste.】

E-waste doesn't only come from computers but other electronics as well.

In 2019, the world produced 53.6 million tons of E-waste.

The world's E-waste will reach 74.7 million tons by 2030. That's almost a 加倍 of the waste in just 16 years.

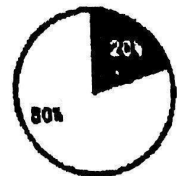

Today, only 15% to 20% of all E-waste is collected and recycled.

Do you ever feel like you're not smart enough or good enough? Are you afraid your classmates will find out how little you know? Do you think that you only succeed because of luck rather than your abilities? People with these worries might be experiencing something known as impostor syndrome(冒牌者症候群).

An impostor is a person who acts like someone else in order to trick others. People with impostor syndrome feel like they're pretending to be someone they're not, but they're actually not playing any tricks! People feeling this way may tell themselves that they're not smart enough to be in the top class. Those who suffer from impostor may look down on themselves and may not think they are worth being praised when someone says they have done a good job.

Impostor syndrome is very common in our lives. It often appears when we start a new job or meet a new group of people. Those who often feel like impostors may feel stressed, worried and have low-confidence. This syndrome is believed to result from many factors(因素), including personality, family background and childhood memories.

The good news is that even though we may feel like an impostor sometimes, we don't have to feel that way forever. Here are some things that can help. First, talk to someone we trust and get help. Then, be willing to learn and improve ourselves. Last and the most important, remember that no one is perfect.

56. Which person might be experiencing impostor syndrome?

A. Kate, who likes making lots of friends.

B. Lucy, who is willing to learn new things.

C. Mary, who thinks it's OK not to be good enough.

D. Nina, who believes she will never do better than others.

57. How will an impostor react to others' praise?

A. He is quite happy.

B. He gets more confidence.

C. He wants to do better next time

D. He thinks others are just being polite

58. What is NOT included in the third paragraph?

A. How will an impostor act?

B. Why is impostor syndrome common?

- C. When can people have impostor syndrome?
 D. What can be the cause of impostor syndrome?
59. How many tips does the writer give to deal with impostor syndrome?
 A. 1. B. 2. C. 3. D. 4.
60. What can we infer from the article?
 A. Impostor syndrome can't be cured.
 B. Everyone will suffer from impostor syndrome.
 C. People with impostor syndrome like to trick others.
 D. We may have impostor syndrome when getting into a new school.

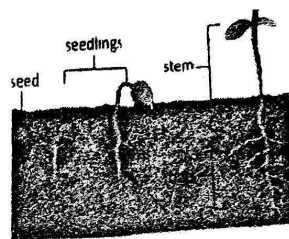

D

What will astronauts eat when a space trip takes years?

"Lots of fresh vegetables," says Dr. Janet Williams, whose team has spent years learning how to grow plants in a space station.

As usual, astronaut George White looked into the closed plant room and found the problem. The stems weren't growing upward and the roots weren't growing downward. On Earth, gravity(重力) helps a plant's stems and roots to find "up" and "down". However, in the space station, there was almost no gravity.

Dr. Williams suggested a solution: give the plants more light, as plants also use sunlight to find their way. And it worked. When the plants had more light, the stems turned up and the roots went down.

Now Dr. Williams worried about the next problem: Would her baby plants live to flower?

Many plants died in the space station, because the space plants were hungry for air. Plants live by taking up CO₂ from the air. When a plant uses it up in the air around, the plant needs moving air to bring more CO₂ close to its surface. On Earth, the air is always moving. And with these air movements plants get enough CO₂.

Many earlier experiments with plants in space had used closed rooms, Dr. Williams tried a new greenhouse that had a fan to keep the air move. The plants loved it. They flowered and even produced more seeds.

"And this," says Dr. Williams, "is one plant closer to a garden in space."

61. Why did Dr. Williams's team try to grow plants in space?
 A. To produce fresh air for astronauts. B. To help astronauts relax themselves.
 C. To provide food for long space journeys. D. To make the space garden more beautiful.
62. How did light help solve the problem mentioned in Paragraph 3?
 A. It caused the gravity to change.
 B. It encouraged the plants to grow faster.
 C. It helped the plants to grow in the right direction.
 D. It showed the astronauts where to plant vegetables.
63. Why did many plants die in the space station?
 A. The light was too strong. B. There was too much CO₂.
 C. There was not enough room to grow. D. The air condition was not good enough.
64. The underlined word "it" in Paragraph 7 refers to _____.
 A. the moving air B. the closed room C. the space journey D. the space garden
65. What can we learn about Dr. Williams's team from the passage?
 A. They mainly live on fresh vegetables.
 B. They have successfully built a space garden.
 C. They invented a special fan for their greenhouse.
 D. They have worked on space gardening for many years.

第二节 阅读下面短文,从短文后所给的五个选项中选出能填入短文空白处的最佳选项,使短文通顺、连贯,意思完整。(每小题1分,满分5分)

The year 2021 is the 1,000th birthday year of Wang Anshi(1021-1086), the famous thinker and poet in the Song Dynasty.

Wang Anshi loved to travel. 66 Once he and his friends travelled to a mountain called Mount Baochan. After they climbed half way up the mountain, they saw a cave. 67 Wang Anshi was worried, he did not know how deep the cave was. He thought it might be dangerous. In the end, they decided to enter the cave. 68 The inside of the cave was fantastic! There were so many beautiful rocks, shining crystals and clear streams. After a while, one of his friends worried that the torch would burn out. He said, "We should go back now." Everyone decided to leave the cave, including Wang Anshi. 69 He thought, "If I stayed longer, I could have seen more beautiful things." He also thought, "when my friend said we should leave, I just followed him without thinking. I shouldn't blame my friend. 70 In the future I must keep it on."

- A. Wang Anshi's friend lit a torch(火把).
- B. It is my fault for following him.
- C. After that he regretted leaving the cave.
- D. He thought travelling was a good way to learn.
- E. One of Wang Anshi's friends wanted to explore the cave.
