Birthday is a special day for most people. We may spend much time celebrating it. On birthday, we may go for a trip, have a party or watch a movie with our parents and friends. We can also enjoy some special food. Do you know what people eat on their birthday around the world? Here are three people from different countries. They tell us what food they eat on their birthday.

Liu Jing is from Beijing. "The long noodles are a symbol of long life. In China, red is a symbol of luck. We think red eggs bring us good luck. So you can see Chinese eat long noodles and red eggs when they celebrate their birthday," says Liu Jing.

"I am so happy because today is my birthday. I want to have a birthday party. At the party, we can play games, sing and dance. We can also eat a big birthday cake with fourteen candles. I'm sure we can have a good time at my birthday party," says David from America.

"In Canada, people put a coin into the cake. If the birthday person eats the cake with the coin, he or she will be lucky. I am so happy because I eat the cake with a coin," says Sandy.

49. Where does Liu Jing come from?

- A. China                      B. Canada                      C. America

Look! Here is a photo of Pan Junfan. Do you know the man? He is 41 years old and people call him "Chinese Blade (刀锋战士)". Now let me tell you something about him.

Pan lost his right leg in 2015. Even walking is hard for him, but he still runs in the Ultra Gobi, a 400-kilometer nonstop, self-navigating race (一段不设休息时间、全程自导航的 400 公里比赛). For the race, Pan exercises every day and he only sleeps for about four hours a day. In the race, he meets a lot of problems on his way, like the cold weather and the terrible terrains (地形), but he doesn't stop. He just keeps walking and running.

At last, Pan finishes the race. Everyone is happy about it. "I want to inspire (激励) people and tell them that never stop going for their dreams." Pan says.

The man in the photo is Pan Junfan. People call him "Chinese Blade".
Pan lost his right leg in 2015. Walking is not 59 for him, but he still wants to run in the race. Before the race, Pan exercises hard and he only gets a short 60 every day. (E)

请阅读下面非连续性文本, 按要求完成所给任务, 并将答案写在答题卡相应的位置上。

Some people can't see. Guide dogs (导盲犬) are the "eyes" for those people. With the help of guide dogs, they can get to different places. A Guide dog can work for a blind (失明的) person until it is ten to twelve years old.

Mrs. Liang

Sherry is my guide dog. She makes me feel safe and helps me know about the outside world. Sherry tells me about steps (台阶) and she helps me cross the busy streets.

Quill: The life of a guide dog is a great movie. It is about a guide dog called Quill. A lot of people know about guide dogs' work because of the movie.

Mr. Sun

Maomao is my guide dog. I walk with him from home to my work place every day. When I need to go to the supermarket, Maomao helps me get on and off the bus.

How can guide dogs be so helpful? The answer is easy. Guide dogs practice a lot.

A guide dog practices walking around the owner's (主人的) neighborhood. In this way, it knows the shops, restaurants and so on. And a guide dog practices how to walk to the owner's work place. It should know when to turn right, turn left or cross roads. A guide dog also practices how to get on and off buses or subways.

Where to get practice
1. ▲ .
2. On the way to the work place.
3. At bus stations or subway stations.

64. Please translate the underlined sentence into Chinese?

65. What is Quill: The life of a guide dog about?

66. How does Mrs. Liang feel about having a guide dog?

67. How does Mr. Sun go to work?

68. Please finish the first part of the chart (表格).
