Once I was invited to be a teacher at a high school camp. On the first day, when we were dancing and playing games, I noticed a small and thin boy under the tree. He was shy and weak. I walked to him, introduced myself and invited him to join in the activities. He quietly answered, "No, I really don't want to do this." I could understand that he was in a new world but I knew it wouldn't be right to force (强迫) him, either.

The next day, I was singing songs with campers when I saw the boy sitting under the tree quietly. I tried again with the same invitation, but he refused once again. That evening I knew the boy's name was Tommy. Then I asked the campers to pay special attention(注意) to the boy and spend time with him when they could.

The days went by and the time came when we had to leave. We held a big, warm party to celebrate the closing of the camp. All the campers shared their wonderful moments. To my surprise, I found Timmy dancing happily with two girls. I couldn't believe it was the same person.

In October of my second year in collage, I received a call from Tommy's mother. She said, "Tommy talked about you so many times. I want you to know that he went back to school and made new friends confidently. You made a difference to Tommy. Thank you so much."
