A little time you spare(抽出) for others makes a big difference.

Alva was a driver who came to pick me up for a three-hour drive because I needed to go to a new workplace. 31 we were driving, he started to tell me his story. He shared that since the pandemic(疫情), he had to change jobs. In order to make money, he needed to spend six days a week in a town with more work to do, 32 his family.

During the talk, I kept the name of his 33, "Nah Bok" in my heart by chance. He mentioned that on his only day off, he would take three different buses for a total of five hours there and back so he could have time with his family.

His story reminded me of 34. My father worked far away from home when I was young. Sometimes for weeks or months at a time, I remember us kids back then, 35 for our turns to have just a couple of minutes on the phone with him.

After two hours into our drive, when I saw a 36 saying "Nah Bok", I asked him if that was where his family lived. He said, "Yes, it is about five kilometers down the road."

I said, "Why don't we stop and say hello?" He looked at me like I was joking. He clearly didn't want to get into any trouble. He wasn't 37 and kept asking if I really wanted to do so. After all, it would take us half an hour more than expected. But I was 38 sure. It was not a big deal for me to spend thirty minutes when this man had to spend five hours getting home each time.

As we 39, his wife was talking on the side of the road with her mother. Seeing Alva coming nearer, she was in 40 and called all of their children out cheerfully. I got to hear a little bit about each of their lives.

Slow down and listen to people's stories. Take time when you can to give a gift to somebody else, even if it's just your time.

For the first time, the Palace Museum opened its doors to the public at night for two days. It gave visitors the chance to see its palaces and temples in beautiful lights. The idea was a hit.

To attract more visitors, the museum gave away 500 tickets to people on Tuesday, and another 3,000 tickets on Wednesday night.

The lucky visitors enjoyed light shows and a Beijing opera show at the Belvedere of Pleasant Sounds, the Palace Museum's largest theater. They could hear the music all over the museum, as there were fewer people at night than during the day.

The opening was part of hard work to change the image(形象) of the Palace Museum as it has always been conservative(保守的). "The more the Palace Museum does, the more influential(有影响力的) it will be," said Shan Jixiang, the museum's director. He is a man of creative ideas. Since he became director of the Palace Museum, he has brought many changes to make traditional treasures come alive again.

Yang Xi, a writer, visited the museum with her husband on Tuesday night. "The light show was wonderful," she said, "It makes it possible to see a different side of the Palace Museum."

44. It's the first time for the Palace Museum to open to the public ____.

C. the Palace Museum is working hard to change its image
D. people can only see the same side of the Palace Museum

C

My name is Robinson Crusoe, and I was born in the city of York in 1632. My father was a successful businessman. I had two elder brothers. One of them worked in the army and was killed during the war against Spain. The other was missing one day, and we never knew what had happened to him. My father gave me a good education and wanted me to be a lawyer(律师).

However, I wanted to be a sailor(水手) and go to sea. My father was very angry with me. He didn't understand why I wanted to leave his house, where I would have an easy and comfortable life.

"Two kinds of people go to sea," he said. "They are the very poor people and the very rich people. The poor are foolish, having no other way to live. The rich own ships and can make money with them. You are neither too poor nor too rich. You are in the middle, so you should choose a middle way for your life. Stay at home with your mother and me. Your elder brother didn't listen to me, and now he is dead. If you do not listen to me, you will have a difficult life!"

▲, but I couldn't. I spoke to my mother.

"Please ask Dad if he will let me have one voyage(航海) by sea," I asked her. "When I return, I will live the life he wants me to live."

Mum was angry. "Your father will not let you go. I don't want you to go to sea either. It's dangerous."

I argued with my parents for another year. Then, I went to Hull with a friend who was going to London by ship. He invited me to go with him, and I agreed. I did not even tell my parents before leaving. I just went. That was how all my bad luck began.

— Taken from Robinson Crusoe

48. In the war against Spain, _____ died.
A. Robinson

Up to 45 percent of teenagers in the UK bite their nails(咬指甲), according to the BBC. Some people bite their nails not because they're too long, but because they are driving a car, feeling stressed out, or just have nothing else to do.

In 2013, the American Psychiatric Association thought of nail biting as a symptom(症状) of obsessive-compulsive disorder(OCD, 强迫症). People with this disorder may wash their hands more often than usual or have to line up everything in a certain way.

Although nail biting has some things in common with other symptoms of OCD, it is different from them in at least one way.

"In OCD, the behavior is really unwanted," said psychiatrist Carol Mathews. People with OCD don't want to wash their hands over and over again. There is no fun in it. They just fear that if they aren't busy doing something, something bad might happen to them.

But nail biters enjoy this activity. "It's rewarding. When you get the right nail, it feels good," said Mathews. Therefore, some people argue that most nail biters do not have any kind of serious mental illness.

However, it's still a bad habit. So what can we do to stop it? Since most people bite nails as a way of relieving(缓解) stress, finding another way to relieve that stress could be useful, suggested Rochelle Torgerson, a doctor at the Mayo Clinic in the US. For example, some people might play with a pen instead.

Nail biters feel the need to bite if they find a small part of the nail that is imperfect, Mathews said. So always keep your nails in good shape.

So, if you happen to bite nails often like a lot of others do, there's no need to worry about that anymore. Just find your own useful way to deal with your stress, and you will surely get rid of it.

What do you think cities will be like in the future? Have you ever heard of Future City?

Last year, students from Nankai Secondary School imagined, researched, designed, and built cities of the future of their own, according to a project-based learning program named Future City. In their works, they showed their solutions to a citywide problem.

Not only students in Nankai, but also teenagers from around China, have joined Future City. It has played an important role in helping middle school students to develop their interest in science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM).

Each year, Future City has a specific topic. Past topics include storm-water management, public spaces, green energy, and so on. The 2021-2022 theme is A Waste-Free Future. What teams need to do is to design a waste-free city.

This program is quite different from others. It allows students to do the things that engineers do. In other words, they think and work like engineers.

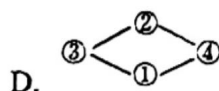

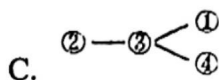

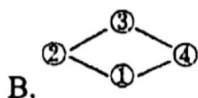

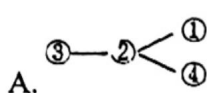

To finish the design, students have to follow some certain process(过程). To start with, they should know what the problems are and come up with new ideas. After that, they work together to make their own plans. After testing, retesting, and building, a model of their own will probably be built. Finally, they can start to write their city paper and make a presentation video to share their results.

This process is called the engineering design process. It builds students’ 21st-century skills by encouraging students to use math and science while dealing with real-world problems. They can develop writing, public speaking, time management skills, and project management skills. After completing Future City, students can also learn to be better citizens in the future.

“It brought us together,” Nan Nan, one of the students, told local newspaper Chongqing Daily. “We all got to put in ideas, and we watched it come to life. We all hope to join Future City again next year.”
