Teaching good manners to kids is very important. It's best to let them develop good table manners when they are young. So they can carry these when they grow up.

Good eating manners begin with good table manners. Tell your kids that dinner time is family time. There should be no mobile phones or text messages at the table. Instead, mealtime should be used for talking about family things.

Kids should say "please" and "thank you" when asking for things on the table. They should not reach over(越过) other people to get things that they want.

Teach your children not to eat with their mouths open or talk with their mouths full. If it's hard for them to understand, try showing them how it looks and sounds. When they see this, they'll understand how they look to other people. They should also eat slowly and take small bites(咬).

Washing hands before and after eating is important to health. When eating at a friend's house, tell your kids to remember to thank the host for the meal. Let them put their own dishes in the sink after dinner. For elder children, they can help do the dishes.

Some families do not have time to eat meals together more than once a week. Our community decided that it was time to take a break.

After three weeks of planning, we took one night off. It was a night for families to spend time together. 37 On that night, sports teams stopped their practices, and teachers did not give homework.

On "Family Night", we decided to turn off our televisions. 38 Answering machines (电话留言机) said, "Please call back tomorrow." Many families ordered hamburgers and other food from shops or restaurants so that they wouldn't spend time cooking.

39 Among them, storytelling and card games were the most popular. These games gave families the chance to spend time together. Children and parents weren't so busy, and children didn't spend so much time playing computer games or watching television. 40
