From: vincentlee@126.com
 To: Cindy; Martin; Neil; Rita; Walt; Elliot
 Date: May 25th
 Subject: You Are Invited!

Hello, Sandra's dearest friends,

June 2 is Sandra's 25th birthday. Sandra has been our best friend for a long time. For this wonderful friend, I plan to have a different party to celebrate her special day. We all know that Sandra is a big fan of Detective (侦探) Conan, so the party is named Who Took Away the Ring.

Everyone that is coming to the party will be given a role and the role's script (剧本). So if you decide to join us, you will have to prepare a costume for your role. For example, if you play a waitress, you'll have to dress up as a waitress to the party and then talk to the other people playing roles according to the script. During the party, you'll join us in finding out who took away the queen's ring.

The party will be held at Jade Hotel at 7 p.m. on June 2nd. Lots of delicious foods and drinks will be prepared, so there's no need to worry about getting hungry or thirsty. Please tell us if you'd like to join the party at the end of this month.

Best wishes,

Vincent Lee

Animal behavior is an interesting and attractive study. Scientists research the ways animals use to look for food. They study how animals protect themselves from their predators and which animals kill other animals for food. All of this helps us understand how useful animals can be.

Each country raises some animals for food. In the United States, people mainly eat meat from cows, chickens and pigs. In other countries, people might raise sheep or buffalo (水牛) for meat. These differences come in part from weather and other environmental conditions. People around the world eat all kinds of fish and shellfish from oceans and rivers. In some countries, people don't always choose some animals, such as dogs for food while in other countries such animals may become people's favorite food.

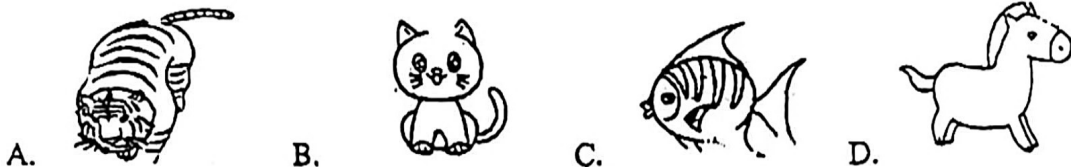

In West Africa, animals provide humans with more than food. They have been helping people do daily work for thousands of years. Horses, oxen, and other work animals pull heavy things. Elephants, camels, and other animals carry people and things from place to place. Carrier pigeons (信鸽) have been used to send messages.

People also receive health benefits from animals. For example, dogs and cats can help calm people down. This is helpful for people fighting illnesses. Animals can also reduce stress, helping people to draw their attention to learning new information, such as reading. When people are walking their dogs or horses, it encourages exercise.

Animals and humans share space on Earth, so keeping a healthy relationship with animals around us is in our best interest.

- () 56. What is the passage mainly about?
- A. Where animals live and how they look for food.
 B. The relationship between animals and humans.
 C. Different things animals can do in different countries.
 D. What humans should do when communicating with animals.
- () 57. The underlined word "predators" in Paragraph 1 probably means _____.
 A. neighbors B. friends C. children D. enemies
- () 58. Which animal can be seen in West Africa to help people?

- () 59. Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?
- A. People around the world eat all kinds of fish.
 B. Horses are helpful for people fighting illnesses.
 C. Elephants encourage humans to do more exercise.
 D. Africans mainly eat meat from cows, chickens and pigs.
- () 60. Which of the following is the structure (结构) of the passage?

Have you found that it's hard to take your eyes off your phone? Do you feel left-out if you are not invited to a party? Do you think that others are having more fun, and living better lives than you? If the answer to any of these questions is "yes", you may be suffering from (遭受) the Fear Of Missing Out or "FOMO". But don't worry. FOMO influences many people in the modern world. You are not alone.

FOMO has become a common social situation in recent years. The growth of mobile technologies and social medias is where FOMO comes in. New mobile technologies help us connect with anyone at all times. However, it is a double-edged sword (双刃剑). Today most of the social medias are filled with photos and updates which only show the best parts of others' lives. That can leave us a feeling that our own lives are imperfect.

So, what can we do to fight against FOMO? One idea is to cut down the time you spend on social medias. Setting time limits (时限) for how long you read through or use social medias each day will be helpful. Also, it's a good way to just focus on what you have but not what you don't. What's more, keep a so-called gratitude journal (感恩日志), where you write down three things you are grateful for every day. With these tips, FOMO can be beaten, and you will be able to have a more enjoyable life.

- () 61. _____ might be experiencing FOMO.
- A. Kate who thinks she lives a better life than others
B. Ben who doesn't mind not being invited to a party
C. Tim who finds it hard to take his eyes off the phone
D. Linda who doesn't like keeping in touch with others.
- () 62. The underlined sentence "You are not alone" means _____.
A. it's OK to live alone sometimes
B. there are more questions to come
C. it's unusual for you to have FOMO
D. some people also suffer from FOMO
- () 63. The second paragraph is mainly about _____ of FOMO.
A. the meaning B. the reasons C. the history D. the solutions
- () 64. According to the passage, _____ are the ways to fight against FOMO.
① keeping a gratitude journal
② setting limits on making friends
③ focusing on what you don't have
④ cutting down the social media time
A. ①② B. ②③ C. ③④ D. ①④
- () 65. The main idea of the passage is _____.
A. having fun using the mobile phone
B. staying far away from social medias
C. recognizing and fighting against FOMO
D. enjoying and showing the best part of life

If you're searching for a simple place to stay for a few nights, a capsule (胶囊) hotel might offer the perfect choice for you. 66 There's little you can do inside your room except sleeping. However, capsule hotels usually provide other services. 67

To keep costs low, the walls of the capsule hotels are often built from plastic. The size of a room is no larger than the length (长度) and width of a small bed. 68 In an expensive city like Tokyo, the cost of a room at a capsule hotel can be as low as JPY¥ 2,000 per night.

69 Since then, many Japanese loved the idea. More capsule hotels opened throughout the country. From there, it spread to several other nations such as China 70 Some are even predicting that they could become the future of housing.

- A. The first capsule hotel was built in Japan in 1979.
- B. However, they can help travelers save lots of money.
- C. Capsule hotels provide tiny rooms and just a few services.
- D. Shared bathroom and dining areas are available for guests to use.
- E. Many experts believe that capsule hotels will become more popular.

I once read a story. An Australian woman lived in China for many years. Back in 81, she used an umbrella to keep 82 (her) out of the sun. Suddenly, a man driving by yelled out to her, "It's not raining, dear!"

I'm sure this won't 83 /'hæpən/ in China. So 84 did he say this to the lady?

In Australia, people like to sunbath (日光浴) at the beach. They want their skin to get tanned (晒黑的). In general, Australians feel that having tanned skin shows that you are 85 (health) and outgoing. This is a 86 /'kɒmən/ idea across the 87 (west) world.

But in China, it is the opposite. Many people don't want to get tanned. They feel that the sun is bad for their skin and they want to have a much 88 (light) skin color. My Chinese friends have given me an umbrella many times when I didn't have 89. But I just wanted to get some sunshine!

So, it seems that this comes down to the 90 /'kɒltʃə(r)/ of beauty. The truth is that all skin is beautiful. So, love your skin, whatever the color
