Some people collect all kinds of paintings, drawings and photographs. Others collect goods (商品) such as balls, cards and clothes from their favorite sports. It seems easy to start a collection, but how do you become a smart collector? Here are several rules for you to follow.

● Enjoy things you collect

Collect things that you are interested in. Collect things that you want to keep for a long time. Don't waste your money and time on something you don't really like. Think twice before you start a collection.

● Learn to become an expert(专家)

Read a lot of books about the things you collect as well as visit many museums. Go to different markets and talk to antique (古董) experts there. Feel free to ask them a lot of questions. Don't worry! Experts love to talk and share.

● Look for the best

Collect things that are in good condition. An antique toy in perfect condition, for example, will be valuable in the future. A similar toy in bad condition will not be as valuable.

● Collect rare(稀有的) things

Rare things are more valuable than common ones. If the things you collect are rare today, they will be more valuable in the future.

Everyone can be a smart collector. Why not start your collection in a wise way?

- () 48. How many rules are mentioned in the article?
A. Two. B. Three. C. Four. D. Five
- () 49. Jack believes that collecting coins from the 1800s is better than collecting common coins of today. Which of the following rules matches his idea?

B. Collecting basketballs brings Jack great pleasure.
C. Jack collects basketballs signed by famous players
D. Some of the basketballs Jack collects are in poor condition.
- () 51. The best title for the article is _____.
A. Fine Art Collections B. The Fun of Collecting
C. Be a Smart Collector D. Be an Antique Expert

In Singapore, primary and high school students take outdoor-skills courses as part of their studies. They are usually three to five days long and include rope-rock climbing, going to sea in a small boat, sleeping in a tent at night, taking long walks in the forest, and learning to make a fire. It's real life. One careless mistake could make someone really get hurt. Are those outdoor skills really important?

Minister of Education Ng Chee Meng says that the outdoor courses help students develop skills like critical thinking (批判性思维), teamwork, and good communication—abilities that are necessary for work and life. He believes that these skills are as important as traditional subjects. Students need to learn from books, but for some lessons, reading isn't as useful as doing.

What do the students think? Angelique, a student from Singapore, went for a boat trip in the sea. "It helped me to grow stronger," she says. The trip was stressful (有压力的) because it was stormy that day. There were moments when she felt afraid and hopeless. But she remembered that "smooth seas never makes a skilled sailor (水手)" and felt brave enough to continue against the storm. "I am thankful for this amazing chance," she says.

Right now, students attend the courses with groups from their own school. After 2020, however, all students will do the course in groups from several different schools. Why does this matter? Good communication skills are more important now than ever. Working closely with students from other backgrounds is a great way to learn this useful lesson.

One student said it this way, "There is nothing to be afraid of and nothing's impossible." And that's a great lesson to learn.

- () 52. What do we know about the outdoor-skills courses from Paragraph 1?
A. They are similar to P.E.
B. They are usually one week long.
C. Students may get hurt in the courses.
D. Each student in Singapore needs to take them.
- () 53. The writer uses Angelique's example to show _____.
A. why the courses are popular
B. what the courses are really like
C. what students think of the courses
D. how students can succeed in the courses
- () 54. How different will the outdoor-skills courses be after 2020?

- A. They will include more activities.
- B. They will be much longer in time.
- C. Students will have to attend them more often.
- D. Students from different schools will have to work together.

() 55. What can be the best title of the passage?

- A. Outdoor Courses in Singapore
- B. Education in Singapore
- C. Important Outdoor Skills
- D. The Future of School Courses

Although most dogs are kept just as pets, assistance (协助) dogs are specially trained to help people with disabilities (残疾). These dogs help their owners live more independent lives. There are several kinds of assistance dogs, but the most common are guide dogs, hearing dogs and service dogs.

Guide dogs help blind people get around their homes and communities. Most guide dogs are large dogs like German shepherds (牧羊犬), which wear a harness (系带) with a U-shaped handle (手柄). It allows the dog and its owner to communicate. The owner gives directional (方向的) orders, and the dog makes sure its owner is safe.

Hearing dogs tell a person who is deaf or has trouble hearing to pay attention to sounds like doorbells, baby cries and smoke alarms. They're trained to touch their owners and lead them to where the sound comes from. Hearing dogs are generally small or not too large. They always wear orange harnesses that can be easily seen.

Service dogs usually help people who are sitting on the wheelchair (轮椅). The dogs are trained to pick up dropped things, open and close doors, help people get into or out of a wheelchair, and find help when needed. Because many of these tasks require strength (力量), most service dogs are large dogs such as Golden or Labrador retrievers (寻回犬). These dogs usually wear a backpack or harness.

Guide dogs, hearing dogs and service dogs have one thing in common. Before being matched with a human partner, each kind of assistance dog undergoes a one to two-year training program. After the dog and its owner are matched, they begin to trust each other and often become a team.

- () 56. An assistance dog is specially trained to help a person who _____.
 A. is disabled B. is in danger C. asks for help D. loves dogs
- () 57. Service dogs are generally _____.
 A. small B. large C. active D. quiet

Huang Dafa, an old Chinese man from a poor village of Guizhou Province, spent 36 years building about 10 kilometers of water channels (沟渠) through three mountains. He brought water and a better life to the villagers there.

Huang Dafa was born in 1935 in Zunyi, Guizhou. His village was short of water. The villagers could only get water from a faraway well (水井). In 1959, Huang decided to solve the problem by building a long water channel through mountains.

Villagers spent 10 years building a 100-meter-long channel, but the water didn't arrive. They realized that they didn't have enough knowledge to build a well-working channel. Huang didn't give up. He spent several years studying and led the villagers to try again in 1992.

In 1995, the villagers finished the water project and named it Dafa Channel. The water finally reached Huang's village. Electricity and a new road also reached the village. Huang led all the three projects.

"We shouldn't wait for things to happen," said Huang, the real-life Yu Gong.

65. Did Huang Dafa spend 36 years in building the water channels?

66. Where did the villagers get water before the water channels were built?

67. What were the three projects that Huang Dafa led for the village?

68. Do you agree with what Huang Dafa said? Why or Why not?
