Autumn is a good season to do sports, because in summer it is too hot. But how you feel is quite different from how your body feels. Your body works more slowly, so it is easy for you to be hurt (伤害) when doing sports. Here is some advice (建议).

Drink water. It is often very dry in autumn and your body loses (丢失) water easily. So it is good to drink 500ml of water two hours before you exercise. But be careful you cannot drink water as soon as (一旦) you finish your exercise. Just do it about 15 minutes after that.

Warm up your body. Before you do any sport, remember to do some warming-up activities (活动) for example walking morning exercises to get your body ready for the sport.

Have outdoor activities. It is cool outside your door and the air is much better. So outdoor Activities like climbing hills, riding bikes and running or jogging are much fun. These can help you lose more fat, get you relaxed (放松) and help you work well.

Do not eat too much after the sport. If you cannot control your mouth, it is better not to do any sport. You can have some fruit or vegetables if you really want to eat something.

56. What must you remember to do before you do some exercise?

A. Eat a lot of food before your exercise.

B. Climb the hills, ride your bike and run

C. Drink enough water and begin your sport.

D. Do some warming-up activities to get your body ready for the sport.

57. What outdoor activity does this passage NOT mention (提及)?

A. Walking.

B. Jogging.

C. Skating.

D. Riding the bike.
