A

Let me tell you something very important: Never have water near you when you have something electric not far away! Last month, a terrible thing happened in my family.

My brother Tom received a set of new train toys. We decided to build a little “world” for it with mountains, streetlights and even a lake. We found a large board that was big enough to hold the train. We spent over a week building the things with paper and cardboard.

When we finished all the things, we showed everyone our new train set. It was very wonderful. Now, I turned it on and the train began to move. Everyone was excited.

I turned to look at Tom, and he looked strange. He was shaking（颤抖）. “Tom!” I shouted. He didn’t move, looking straight ahead. Suddenly, my dad understood what was happening. He reached quickly for the switch and turned off the train.

The water had leaked（漏）from the bag under the board and arrived where Tom was standing. One of our wires had fallen under the table and was touching it. We sent Tom to the hospital. And luckily Tom was fine. He told us that when the electricity was on, he could not move at all.

We learned a lesson that day. Keep water away from electricity!

26. What did Tom and I use to build the new train set?

- A. Paper and cardboard B. Mountains
- C. Streetlights D. A lake
