Many times we don't want to do chores. However, the problem is that sometimes putting things off makes things worse. Wonder how to deal with it? It's helpful to start by taking baby steps towards finishing chores, especially those you find boring.

Your first step might be to make a list of chores you have to finish. It helps you know where to begin. Then, as you decide which chores to do, you can break them down into some easy steps such as washing dirty dishes, bringing the right tools, and checking the results.

Another baby step is just to imagine what a difference you will make. Imagine what your home will be like after you finish these chores. When you picture it in your mind, you'll take action quickly.

Finally, you'd better give yourself a time limit (限时). Try to spend limited time working on chores, and reward (奖励) yourself with something pleasant. You'll probably find that doing chores is not really bad, and you may even want to give yourself more time to do them. What's more, finishing them will probably be rewarding enough, but you can always reward yourself with something special for a job well done.

Taking one step at a time can take you a long way towards your goals. So next time you have to do chores you hate, start taking these baby steps. Maybe you will finish all the chores before you know it.

On the stage of the closing ceremony of the Beijing 2022 Paralympic Winter Games, Ma Yifei, a 16-year-old blind girl, moved people by playing the Beijing 2022 theme song, Snowflake on the violin.

Ma is a student in Ningxia Special Education High School in Ningxia, who became blind at the age of two through illness. Ma became interested in music when she was young. Ma's mother, Ha Chunyan, used to be a music teacher and helped her learn to play the piano and the violin. "She could not see the keys and always played the wrong notes (音符). It took a few thousand times for her to play a piece correctly," said Ha. Learning the violin was harder for the blind girl. Ma had problems pulling(拉) a straight bow(琴弓) at first, so she needed to feel the teacher's hands, arms and back to learn the movements. "After three years of learning, she still could not make any sound except noises," said Ha, who advised her daughter to give up, but Ma said, "As I've been practicing so long, it's hard to give up. I believe it will get better if I persist (坚持)." In 2018, she had the chance to follow Sheng Yuan and Cao Yuhan, two famous musicians, to study music and started her long schooling journey from Yinchuan to Beijing. Her parents took turns taking her to Beijing every week. They were always in a hurry to catch the train and often had bread for dinner. "But my daughter did not seem to be tired, smiling all the way," Ha said.

Ma expressed her joy about taking part in the closing ceremony. "Without my persistence, I wouldn't be able to stand on the stage today," she said.
