My best friend Ally and I spend a few hours of our time every week as volunteers for Buddy Ball. It's a program that helps disabled kids do sports and make new friends.

So what does a buddy do? At the moment, I am a buddy for an eleven-year-old boy called Tom. He is in a wheelchair and is a good basketball player, but just like any kid, it makes him sad when he misses a shot or makes a bad pass. He starts to cry and doesn't want to play. Sometimes he even wants to give up. So, as his buddy, I encourage him. Now we're working on our basketball skills together. It is great to see how he has improved and he doesn't get sad so easily.

Ally is a buddy for Clara, a kid with very few language skills. She is also a bit wild! She likes running away. Ally has learned how to work with Clara and to get her to join the games. Now she loves baseball and has more friends. Next week she's playing in a team. Her parents are truly happy about Buddy Ball and they say that Clara has become more confident and sociable since she joined Buddy Ball.

Buddy Ball is a great chance for everyone! Differences disappear and we realize that we're all just kids loving sports. I love volunteering for Buddy Ball because I know I'm doing something meaningful!

Wang Damin is a fisherman. Although he is over 65, he is very (A) fit and still enjoys working.

Damin uses cormorants to catch fish. Cormorants are large black birds. (B) 他们擅长捕鱼 because they can swim well. They can dive down and stay under the water for up to two minutes.

Damin usually sets off in the late afternoon and gets the cormorants ready for work. (C) First, he ties a piece of grass around their necks to stop them from eating big fish. Then when Damin's boat (D) gets to the right place in the river, he pushes them into the river. Damin uses several ways to attract fish. During the day, he jumps up and down on his boat. After dark, he hangs a light on a post at the front of the boat. The cormorants bring the fish back to the boat. The fish are then taken and thrown into a big basket (E) Damin. No nets are required for this type of fishing.

Cormorant fishing was once practised in lots of places in South-East China, and there were many fishermen in the area. (F) today, few young people are interested in it. In 50 years, perhaps there will be no more cormorant fishermen in the world.
