Once there was a milkman named Deenu. He had built his hut far away from his village in the woods. He preferred the quietness of the woods to the noisy village.

Deenu was an honest (诚实的) man. He treated every person fairly, but sometimes he got cheated (骗). He thought the world was full of bad people.

One evening, Deenu was returning home after selling milk in the village. He saw an old man sitting under a tree meditating(冥想), so he walked up quietly.

"Can I help you?" the man asked with his eyes closed.

"Yes, I want to know how to change the world. Everything in nature is so beautiful, but there are so many bad people who only care about themselves. What can I do?" Deenu said.

The man smiled and said, "I can see that you are a responsible man. Answer a few questions first. Did you smile at all the customers (顾客) who came to buy your milk today?"

"Sometimes, but not all," Deenu replied.

"When you smiled, did they smile back?" the man asked.

"Yes, they were very nice people."

"For those people you don't like, did you show them a smile first?"

"Not really. why should I?" Deenu asked.

"What if you gave them a smile as well?"

"Well, they... they might smile back," Deenu said.

"That's it. If you really want to do something for the world, you can start with yourself. You can't decide how other people think or act, but you can decide what you do," the old man said patiently.
