My day started just like all the other days. I left for the train station at 7: 30 a.m.to arrive at work by 8: 30 a.m, "Just36 day, "I thought.

I didn't know why but for some reason when I got on the train that day, it was unusually 37 . I sat down in the only seat beside a man who had his head down and seemed to be 38 in his thoughts. Shortly after the train left I found myself 39 what could be so important that the man didn't even see me. I tried to forget about it. 40 , for some strange reason this "inner 41 " kept asking me to talk to this man.

42 I made up my mind and thought of an excuse to ask him a question. When he 43 his head, I could see that he must have been really sad 44 he had red eyes and still had tears rolling down the side of his face.

We talked for about 20 minutes and he seemed to be feeling 45 . As we were leaving the train, he thanked me politely for 46 the time talking with him. I never 47 what made him so sad, but was glad I listened to the "voice" that day.

Several weeks later, I noticed a 48 on my desk. It was from the man I met on the train, thanking me for 49 his life. In it he explained that with no hope he shouted to God that if God really cared about him he would 50 someone to stop him from taking his own life. In his eyes I was that someone sent my God.

So next time, you know why you should follow your "inner voice" to talk to a friend, a relative and even a stranger.

A Farewell Song

No dust is raised on the road wet with morning rain; The willows by the hotel look so fresh and green.

I invite you to drink a cup of wine again; West of the sunny pass no more friends will be seen.

(Translated by Xu Yuanchong)

Time flies and you will soon graduate from junior school. It might be a little sad to say goodbye to your teachers and classmates. This same feeling was shared more than 1,000 years ago, when the Tang Dynasty poet Wang Wei (701-761) had to say goodbye to his friend Yuan Er.

The poem begins with a beautiful morning scene. After the rain, the road is clean and free of dust, and the willows by the hotel are fresh and green. On this morning, Yuan Er is leaving for a faraway place called Anxi in today’s Xinjiang.

The last two lines are the most well-known. The poet invites Yuan to drink wine because he knows that life in Anxi will be hard. Most cities in China were prosperous (繁华的) during the Tang Dynasty (618-907), but the western areas were quite desolate (荒凉的). Wang thought the journey to the west would be full of difficulties. So when Wang says “I invited you to drink a cup of wine again,” he is pouring both his care and good wishes into the cup. This sincere love for his friend made this poem popular back then and it remains today.

回答下面 5 个问题, 每题答案不超过 6 个词。

One morning last week, I looked out of my study window and saw that it was a fine day. No, it was a wonderful day. The sun shone down from the sky w 86 a single cloud.

But later that day, hard at work at my desk, I heard a loud n 87 on the roof. Turning to the window, I saw that the s 88 was now the colour of charcoal (木炭). Two minutes l 89, the rain poured, making rivers of water.

This story will give you some idea about the w 90 in Britain. It's variable (易变的). Go ahead with your picnic in the local park by all means, but don't suppose that because the sun is shining now, it will be when you open your pack of sandwiches. You'd better take an u 91, just in case.
