Li Mei loves wearing embroidered (刺绣的) clothes. She is talking with her grandma now.

Li Mei: Has your mother or grandmother ever made embroidered clothes for you?

Grandma: Sure. In the past, Chinese people often embroidered on hats, shoes and dresses to show the beauty of nature or the best wishes to others. Lots of girls would even embroider on a sachet (香囊) as a gift for their lovers.

Li Mei: I know that Shu embroidery comes from Sichuan.

Grandma: Yes. It is said that Shu embroidery is the oldest kind of embroidery in China. People began to make it during the Han Dynasty. They sold it to other countries such as ancient Rome. Shu embroidery takes time. It might take as long as a whole day to finish just 10 cm. Embroidery workers need to divide each silk thread (丝线) into more than 10 or even 30 smaller threads. Each smaller thread is thinner than a human hair.

Li Mei: Oh, it's unbelievable. Do we have inheritors (传承人)?

Grandma: Of course. Meng Dezhi, a national-level inheritor of this skill, has been making Shu embroidery for 40 years. She loves this form of art and wants more people to try it, so she gives lessons in universities. She said, "Although the work is hard, Shu embroidery stands for thousands of years of Sichuan culture. It is a symbol of Chinese culture as well."

There is an amazing river running deep through the Amazon rainforest in Peru. The water temperatures along the river are from 50℃ to 90℃, and in some parts, they can almost reach the boiling point of 100℃. The river's existence (存在) was officially confirmed (证实) in 2011 by a scientist named Andres Ruza.

Ruza heard lots of stories and legends (传说) about the strange river when he was young. 20 years after he'd heard this story, Ruza's aunt told him she had seen the river. Guided by her, the young scientist finally found the river himself, and confirmed that its water did reach boiling temperatures.

"Dipping my hand into the river would give me third-degree burns in less than half a second. Falling in could easily kill me," he wrote in his book The Boiling River: Adventure and Discovery in the Amazon. Ruza said, "What was amazing is that the local people always knew about this place. It is just a part of their everyday life. They cook with it, clean with it, and even make their medicines with it."

But so far, no one has been able to explain the secret of the boiling water. "It reminds us that there are still great wonders to be discovered," Ruza said, "The biggest part of the Boiling River area is still original (原始的) and untamed — and I hope to keep it this way."

Ⅶ. 任务型阅读: 阅读下面的语篇材料, 根据所读内容, 完成下列各题。(共5小题, 计10分)

Many schools say school clothes make it easier for students to pay attention to their lessons. But some students think uniforms are uncomfortable. And they think that kids should have the freedom to show their personality (个性) through their clothing.

● Which do you like better, your own clothes or uniforms?

Helen

Wearing uniforms, we all feel like we are part of the same group. I like to wear my uniforms, so my parents needn't spend much money on other clothes.

Joe

If we wear our own clothes, we can express ourselves, be comfortable, and save money on clothes that we never wear at home.

Dave

When everyone is wearing the same, you don't have to worry about how you look or what you have to wear. Parents can save money, too!

● What can you do to accessorize (搭配) your uniforms?

To accessorize your uniforms, you can follow these steps. First of all, choose a proper color. Take a look at a color wheel and see what colors best complement (互补) each other. Then, buy new shoes according to your color plan. Although your uniforms may look boring, a pair of new shoes may interest you. Finally, shop for other clothing. Try buying a new jacket or a coat. Adding scarves could stand out as well.

Each school has its own requirements for students' dress code (着装要求). Whether you have to wear uniforms or not isn't important. It's important to have confidence and do well in school.
