① One pleasant Sunday evening, I was holding grandpa's hand and taking a walk in the park. "Where are the nuts?" He suddenly said. "William, the monkeys will come out when they're awake." I knew he was lost in one of his memories again. It was the memory when he was a kid. So he acted like a kid. Why did he do like this?

②At last, my parents tried their best to bring grandpa to live with us for his safety. Often he would forget my name and ask me who I was and what I was doing in his house. Each time I would answer softly, “It’s me, Ray, grandpa!” Even if he had forgotten who I was, he would always be my best grandfather. Because I love him, we are family.

③But my grandpa refused and said he liked living alone. Not long after that, he forgot to turn off the fire after cooking. Luckily, one of the neighbors came to help him before the fire could spread. Two weeks ago, a policeman called us because the old man couldn't find the way home.

④This was because he fell ill with Alzheimer's disease(阿尔茨海默症)last year. The doctor said it was a kind of terrible illness which could break a person's memory. The worst part was that it was life-long illness. My parents were worried about him, so they planned to bring him to live with us.
